Floods of Century Feared

Manitoba Residents Urged to Flee Homes

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Red River Valley residents south of Winnipeg were urged to leave their homes today as Manitoba braced for what could be the worst flooding of this century.

Warned that latest forecasts show the Red could rise perhaps half a metre above 1950's major flood levels in areas south of Winnipeg, Premier Sterling Lyon asked all those endangered by rising flood waters to leave their homes voluntarily.

Six Winnipeg hockey arenas were being turned into reception centres for evacuees arriving from flood-stricken regions south of here.

Set up by the Emergency Measures Organization (EMO), Red Cross and Salvation Army, the centres will provide food, lodging, clothing and other services for people who do not have friends or relatives to stay with until the swollen river subsides.

Depending on the response to his appeal for a voluntary evacuation, it was understood Lyon might move today to issue a compulsory evacuation order for some 15,000 valley residents.

The 5,000 or so people living within ring dikes, built around communities more than a decade ago, could be stranded by water for as long as two weeks, he said.

Light rain fell over southern Manitoba Tuesday night, boosting rivers and streams already swollen by spring runoff. The immediate outlook was for showers.

The flood crest is predicted on the Red River next Monday at the border town of Emerson, and May 4, south of Winnipeg.

Although the Red River flows through it, Winnipeg itself is considered safe from major flooding because of the local floodway, built after the disastrous 1950 flood to divert water around the city.

Women and children in flood-stricken areas were being advised to leave their homes today, able-bodied men were asked to stay behind to maintain dikes. The voluntary evacuation area stretches 40 kilometres on either side of the Red River south of Winnipeg.

Meanwhile, it was unclear what response there would be to the voluntary evacuation appeal. Morris, Man., businessman Richard Zilkie said he and a number of others had no intention of evacuating their flood-threatened town.

"They can't scare me so quick," he said, squinting at the grey sky through the drizzle. "I did it before — in '48, '50, and '66. Maybe my wife will go but I got to stay here and look after the business."

However, Alvin Dyck, who owns an electronic equipment store in Morris, was in the midst of packing his entire inventory so that he could leave town today.

Ron Affeldt, director of North Dakota's emergency services, said flooding in the state so far has caused more than $15 million in damage to state property alone.

Affeldt estimated total flooding damage in 42 counties of North Dakota at $52 million and said the situation is the worst disaster in recent state history.

In Saskatchewan, scores of volunteers spent the night piling sandbags at the village of Roche Percee, about 15 kilometres east of Estevan, and had saved 18 valley homes from the flood waters of the Souris River.

Israel, Egypt Sign

Times News Services

OM KHASHIBA, Sinai — Israel and Egypt exchanged documents ratifying their historic peace treaty today after a last-minute dispute over the Palestinian autonomy issue delayed the ceremony for two hours and 20 minutes.

The formal ceremony ratifying the treaty signed March 26 in Washington was conducted at this remote desert surveillance station.

After the honor guards drew up and the Israeli and Egyptian bands started to play, a dispute arose over the side letter to the treaty covering negotiations procedure on autonomy for Palestinians living in the Occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

Sources said Egypt wanted to include the letter in the package of documents and Israel wanted it left out. After the delegations conferred and contacted Cairo and Jerusalem, the dispute was resolved. Israeli sources would not say how the issue was settled.

The exchange took place in bright sunlight under the flags of Israel, Egypt, the United Nations and the United States at a table covered by a green cloth.

Israeli delegation leader Eliahu Ben-Elissar, director of the prime minister's office, called the treaty "a rendezvous with history."

"Ours is a past, a present and a future that began with a common forefather, Abraham, and that will live on forever just as our ancient nations shall always live."

The ceremony originally was planned to be held in both Jerusalem and Cairo. It was changed to the American-run watch station in a

Grits Cheer at 5-point Gallup Lead

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Liberal strategists were ecstatic today that the latest Gallup poll showed Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau with a five-point bulge over the Tories.

They saw it as a confirmation about their optimism for the May 22 federal election, and as proof that a CBC poll showing the Tories ahead was wrong.

"That's what I told you ... the CBC report is dead wrong," Chief Liberal planner Jim Coutts said.

Coutts said the Gallup poll, conducted during the second week of the campaign, "is what I expected."

The results show the Liberals had gained two percentage points in a month, climbing to 43 per cent of the decided voters.

The NDP was also up, gaining two points to 17 per cent, while the Tories dropped three per cent to 38.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent was also happy with the figures.

"Obviously I am pleased ... It is encouraging, at least it is an indication people are responding to issues we think are important," he told reporters in an impromptu press conference aboard his jet.

He said the undecided vote seemed to be breaking his way, and predicted his party would do even better in subsequent polls.

The undecided vote dropped three points to 32 per cent of those surveyed.

Trudeau press aide Pat Gossage said the prime minister was pleased "especially for party workers," but she added: "I don't think they (polls) have much effect on Trudeau himself."

As expected, the Liberals continued to dominate in Quebec with the support of two-thirds of committed voters. The remaining votes in the province were evenly split between the Conservatives and Social Credit. A surprising 43 per cent, however, were still uncommitted.

In western Canada, on the other hand, the Conservatives were backed by about half the decided voters while the Liberals were "slightly but not significantly" ahead of the NDP.

In Ontario, the Conservatives were "marginally but not significantly" ahead of the Liberals with the support of about four in ten committed voters. Only 25 per cent were still undecided.

Teck Plans $150M Mine

Canadian Press

Teck Corp. of Vancouver announced plans Tuesday for a $150 million development of a new copper-molybdenum mine in the Highland Valley, about 65 kilometres southwest of Kamloops.

Company chairman former governor-general Roland Michener described the development as the largest investment ever made in a single metal mine.

New Democrat leader Dave Barrett said that he welcomes the Teck announcement, adding an NDP government would not reintroduce the mineral royalty tax.

The Social Credit government abandoned the tax saying it had caused exploration to drop drastically.

Teck president Dr. Norman Keevil had said in an interview in Vancouver that the project may be threatened if the New Democratic Party is elected in the May 10 British Columbia election.

Keevil said Teck would have to refinance the project if the NDP renewed royalties legislation which the party introduced when it was in power from 1972 to 1975.

Michener told a news conference at Teck headquarters in Toronto that the project is being undertaken "at a time when there is little mining development in Canada."

Construction, to start this spring, will take about 18 months and employ 500 workers at peak periods. The mine will provide 400 permanent new jobs.

Annual output for the mine was estimated at 50,000 pounds of copper and 4,500,000 pounds of molybdenum. The mill will produce at the rate of 25,000 tons a day.

Teck will own 30 per cent of the development while Highmont Mining Corp., of Vancouver, a Teck subsidiary, will own 70 per cent.

Michener said financing has been arranged through the Bank of Montreal.

All of the molybdenum output will be sold to Metallgesellschaft, a major German mining concern which announced Monday it had increased its interest in Teck to 18 per cent from 14 per cent.

Liquor Prices Taking Leap On May 1

The prices of most Canadian spirits and liquors will jump May 1 — some by as much as $1.65 per 40 ounce bottle, the Times has learned.

Details of the increases are being kept under a tight lid but it is understood that some 40 ounce bottles will go up by $1.65 while some 26 ounce bottles of spirits will increase by 75-80 cents.

It is also understood that Scotch may escape the May 1 hikes because of recent price increases to that item.

Liqour Distribution Branch spokesman Joyce Courtney confirmed from Vancouver today that a wide range of price hikes will take effect next Tuesday, but she declined to say just what items will be increased or what the price changes will be.

"The majority of the changes will be on Canadian spirits and liquors. It doesn't include beer or wine; that's about all I can say right now," said Courtney.

She added that the price hikes will not be done on an across-the-board percentage basis, but rather some items will have minor increases while others will jump substantially.

In Vancouver representatives for both Joseph E. Seagram and Sons Ltd. and Potter Distilleries Ltd., confirmed that price increases are on the way, but declined to release any details.

Unions Divided at Pacific Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pressmen have ended joint bargaining with other Pacific Press unions after a mediator's report said they must ease their stand if a strike-lockout that shut down the Sun and the Province almost six months ago is to be resolved.

Phil Needham, co-chairman of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions at Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the evening Sun and morning Province, said Tuesday night the pressmen left the council Monday. He doubted whether they would be present when talks resumed today.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman estimates that the strike, which began last Nov. 1, has cost the company $7 million to $8 million a month in lost revenue and cost employees about $2 million a month in lost wages for a total loss approaching $60 million.

Mediator John Kagel, a San Francisco lawyer, has imposed a news blackout on the talks.

However, The Canadian Press news service obtained a copy of his confidential report dated April 20 which says the pressmen's union must show a greater willingness to bend on a manning clause if the strike is to be resolved.

Pacific Press wants to set manning levels in the pressroom and has said the manning clause in the old contract, which expired Oct. 31, amounts to featherbedding.

Kagel says in the report the pressmen's contention that manning provisions under the old pact are justified "must be discounted because the union rejected impartial testing of their premises through arbitration or mediation-arbitration."

"The position that manning is not for sale is thus an intransigent one which, unless the employer folds, creates an unbridgable impasse. The employer may now take a short-term truce, if it makes some gains and does not pay a great deal for it.

"But what needs to be done is to have pressmen willingness, on a much greater basis than in the past, to bargain about what it (sic) can get for manning to have the strike resolved."

Kagel says a difficulty in resolving the issue is that, under the manning clause in the old contract, pressmen have an expectancy of significant income working overtime shifts.

Kagel says that, once into

Oil Firm Profits Gushing In

NEW YORK (AP) — Profits of Texaco Inc. increased 81 per cent in the first quarter, while Gulf Oil Co.'s earnings rose 61 per cent in the latest in a series of reports showing oil company earnings have benefited from sharply-higher world petroleum prices.

Texaco is the third-largest oil company in the United States. It said Tuesday that net earnings in the quarter rose to $307 million compared with $169.7 million in the first quarter of 1978.

Gulf Oil Co. said its earnings rose to $241 million in the first three months of this year compared with the same period last year.

A 16-per-cent increase to $224 million for the quarter was reported by Shell Oil, while Phillips Petroleum, which has limited foreign operations, reported a four-per-cent increase in profits.

The Ohio-based Marathon Oil reported earnings of $104.4 million. That is an increase of 107 per cent from last year and reflects a one-time West German tax credit of $23 million carried over from prior-year losses, the company said.

Earlier this week, top-ranked Exxon reported a 37-per-cent increase in net profits and Standard Oil of Indian reported a 28-per-cent increase.

The reports come at a time when Congress is debating whether to pass the "windfall-profits tax" that President Carter asked for when he announced he would decontrol domestic oil prices. The U.S. petroleum industry favors decontrol but is fighting the proposal to tax 50 per cent of the new revenues that result from decontrol.

Several oil executives, including Texaco chairman Maurice Granville and Gulf chairman Jerry McAfee, have criticized the president's oil-tax proposal, saying it would add unnecessary government regulation and might hamper energy development.

Texaco, Gulf and others said their quarterly earnings also gained from favorable currency exchange rates, compared with those of a year ago when the U.S. dollar was taking a beating.

$1M Diamond Heist

NEW YORK (AP) — Burglars apparently hid overnight in Gimbels department store at Herald Square in Manhattan before escaping early today with an estimated $1 million worth of rough-cut diamonds and jewelry, police said.

Police said the store's management is preparing an inventory of the stolen items. Officers said they will interview employees for clues to the break-in.

Two guards assigned to patrol the store all night told officers they were unaware of the break-in.

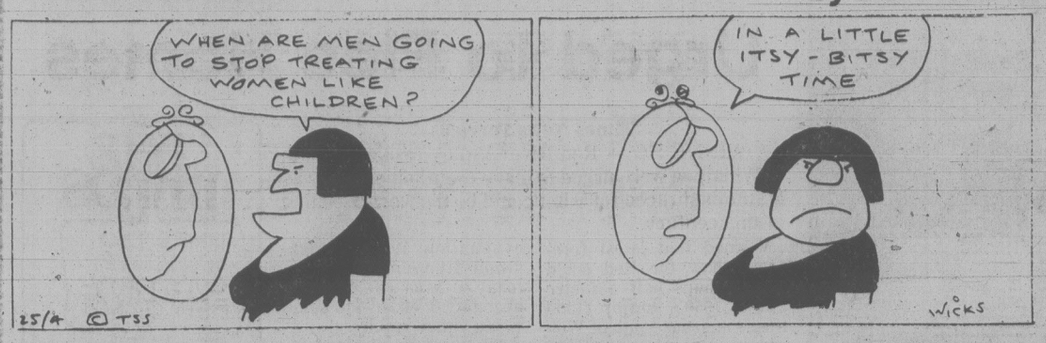

Police said they believe the burglars hid in the store at its 6:30 p.m. closing Tuesday and waited until employees left the store at West 33rd Street and Broadway at 10 p.m. The thieves then broke into a safe at the fifth-floor Marcus and Co. jewelry franchise and scooped up the gems.

They exited by way of a window on the floor which led to a roof connecting to the nearby Statler Hilton Hotel, said police Sergeant Louis Monaco.

Police received a call about the burglary at 11:30 p.m. after the thieves triggered an alarm.

A search of the store uncovered two hammers and chisels near the wall safe which had been broken open.

Israel, Egypt Sign Historic Peace Treaty

Sinai pass to avert further damage to Egypt's standing in the Arab world, which might have been caused by highly-publicized ceremonies.

Meanwhile, Israeli planes buzzed Yasser Arafat's Beirut headquarters twice today and its gunboats and border artillery exchanged barrages with Palestinian guerrillas but Israel's Defence Minister Exer Weizman called on the Palestinians to "stop shooting and start talking."

Even as Weizman made the call to the guerrillas to enter peace talks, Israeli gunners pounded Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon with artillery fire.

The roar of anti-aircraft fire shook Beirut as the Israeli jets thundered past in the second sweep over the Lebanese capital in six hours. The first occurred during the morning rush hour. The second came during the lunch break.

Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said the planes also streaked over Palestinian refugee camps on Beirut's southern edge on a "panic-spreading mission" that drew anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian and Syrian peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

In a further display of anti-Egpytian sentiment, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar broke off diplomatic relations with Egypt today bringing to six the number of Arab countries which have severed relations with Egypt since Cairo agreed to sign the treaty with Jerusalem.

Publicity Angle Too Much

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Darrell Gradwell was so proud of his 21-pound, four-ounce steelhead trout he asked the local paper to take his picture with the prize catch.

Gradwell caught the trout using a flyrod with a three-pound test line in the Thompson River March 28. At the time, trout were not in season.

Ulster Terror Mounts

BELFAST (AP) — IRA gunmen killed a milkman who was a part-time member of the mainly Protestant Ulster Defence Regiment hours after a father of two was slain in Belfast by terrorists who spent more than one hour playing with his children, police reported.

Police said gunmen who knocked at his house were told by Carson's children, aged 10 and seven, their father was out. So they stayed in the sitting room playing with the children for until Carson returned home.

Then they told the children to stay in the living room, took Carson into the front door, and gunned him down. Police said he was a "carefully chosen target," although not a member of the security forces.

International Manhunt for Amin

A 12-member international commando squad financed by Israeli parliamentarian Samuel Flatto-Sharon, is hunting fugitive Ugandan dictator Idi Amin to bring him to trial, Sharon said today.

He told an interviewer he has provided $200,000 to finance the manhunt for Idi Amin, who he believes is hiding on the Ugandan-Zaire border with his last 5,000 supporters.

Sharon, chairman of the Israeli World Congress for the Defence of Oppressed Jews, said his main reason for financing the search is because of Amin's personal role in the murder of Dora Bloch, the elderly British-Jewish woman killed after the 1977 Israeli raid on Entebbe airport to rescue passengers of a hijacked Air France plane.

He said the international squad looking for Amin is based in various parts of Uganda and is made up of six Ugandans, two Israelis, two Americans and two other Africans. All have African fighting experience, he said.

The squad was conceived after Robert Sibounie, a leader of the anti-Amin struggle, visited Sharon in Israel to request aid for their cause.

Sharon said he donated funds. An Israeli newspaper report says he also introduced Sibounie to two other wealthy Israelis who also contributed.

Meanwhile, it was reported today in Kenyan papers that land mine explosions killed or wounded hundreds of Ugandan soldiers loyal to Amin as they tried to escape advancing Tanzanian columns.

The Standard and The Daily Nation said eight buses were destroyed Tuesday as about 1,000 of Amin's men drove through eastern Uganda.

Amin's forces presumably had placed the mines earlier as a defence against other Ugandans and the Tanzanians fighting for the new provisional government of President Yusufu Lule.

The Standard quoted Kenyan border officials as saying the fleeing soldiers tried to enter Kenya but were refused permission unless they gave up their weapons and vehicles. The Ugandans then decided to head north into the half of Uganda that remains beyond Lule's control.

Officials in Kampala, the Ugandan capital, said three columns of Tanzanian troops were moving slowly north and east in an attempt to pacify the country.

SHAH NOW SEEKING PANAMA ASYLUM?

PANAMA CITY (Reuter) — Relatives of the shah of Iran have begun talks with the Panamanian government in a bid to find him a home, Justice Minister Adolfo Ahumada said Tuesday.

Ahumada told reporters that an unidentified brother of the shah arrived in Panama City to explore the possibilities of finding a residence for the exiled monarch.

His comments came two days after the Iranian government warned the United States and Mexico that relations with those countries would sour if they accepted the shah.

Asked about Iran's reaction to the shah living in Panama, Ahumada said: "Panama will act as a sovereign and independent state according to its own interests."

Burns . . . he's 'The Entertainer of the Century'

Ambassador Fiddle Not Very Diplomatic

A military court in Amman has sentenced Jordan's former ambassador to Britain to six months at hard labor for selling the embassy's furniture and pocketing the money. Salah Abu Zaid, was originally sentenced to three years but the sentence was later reduced by a military governor.

Only for the great Bela Lugosi would Count Dracula climb out of his coffin in broad daylight — but there he was, in the person of George Hamilton — placing a black wreath with white lilies on the late Lugosi's star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame. It was all hype for Hamilton's Dracula flick Love at First Bite, but he made the most of it — arriving in a horse-drawn hearse and quaffing a blood-red toast to the memory of the greatest vampire of them all. Then, just before he left, he kissed fan Debbie Miricanyan — on the neck, of course.

According to record company sources, Linda Ronstadt is "looking for suitable digs" in New York. She has an appointment set up with a realtor in New York in what looks like "a serious Big Apple move," says the record company — indicating a possible cooling-off in her two-year romance with boyfriend, California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Entertainer of the Century was the tag hung on George Burns Tuesday by the United Motion Picture Association in Kansas City, Mo., and 100 bathing suit-clad lovelies marked the occasion by presenting him with a 6-foot-long flower-bedecked cigar. Quipped the 83-year-old Burns, "I am now the Entertainer of the Century. If you think I made it in this century wait until you catch me in the next."

A Soviet prisoner who passed messages to Anatoly Shcharansky inside bars of soap or shouted them through sewer pipes says the imprisoned Jewish activist is suffering excruciating headaches but his spirits are "higher than the sky." The interview with Hillel Butman and other recently-released prisoners, held at the apartment of dissident leader Andrei Sakharov, provided the first eyewitness account of the fate of Shcharansky and Yuri Orlov, both imprisoned last summer. Another released prisoner, Anatoly Altman, said he became friends with Orlov in a labor camp and that he was suffering from debilitating work and was sent to an even tougher camp for hardened criminals.

Ex-Beatle Ringo Starr says he nearly died when he collapsed in his Monte Carlo home two weeks ago and later underwent surgery to remove part of his intestines. "I had a good look at death in the face. I was convinced this was it," Starr, 38, said in an interview published today in The Sun in London. "It all went back to when I had peritonitis (inflammation of abdominal membrane that causes severe internal pain and fever) as a child. Suddenly everything twisted up inside me," Starr said in the interview at his London home. "I was told that another minute or two and it was nearly curtains," he said of his collapse. The Sun said Starr, who has concentrated on film and record production since the Beatles broke up nine years ago, looked weak and pale after the surgery.

And, finally, actress Barbara Rush, who co-starred in such films as Magnificent Obsession and The Young Philadelphians, has been awarded $35,000 in an out-of-court settlement resulting from a 1974 accident involving a city of Los Angeles garbage truck. The award was approved by City Council on the advice of deputy city attorney Arthur Rutledge, who said the court had recommended a settlement of between $45,000 and $60,000. Rutledge said a fully loaded sanitation truck struck Miss Rush's car Dec. 4, 1974, sending it crashing into another vehicle. The actress, who suffered numerous bruises and a back strain, claimed losses of $49,410 in earnings during the three months she was unable to work.

Thatcher Slipping In the Straight

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher's chances of becoming Britain's first woman prime minister in the May 3 general election dimmed today as opinions polls showed her Conservative party's lead over Labor dwindling steadily.

The polls published in two staunchly Conservative newspapers also showed that Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan is more popular than Mrs. Thatcher with Britain's 40 million voters.

With only eight days to go before the general election, a Market and Opinion Research International poll in The Daily Express said the Tory lead has slumped to six from 12 percentage points last week.

The poll, completed Monday, gave the Conservatives 46 per cent, Labor 40 and the middle-road Liberals 11. A poll by the same organization March 30 gave the Conservatives a nine-point margin.

The latest poll showed Mrs. Thatcher's personal popularity tumbled to 33 per cent from 37 last week, while Callaghan increased his lead to 64 from 45 per cent last week.

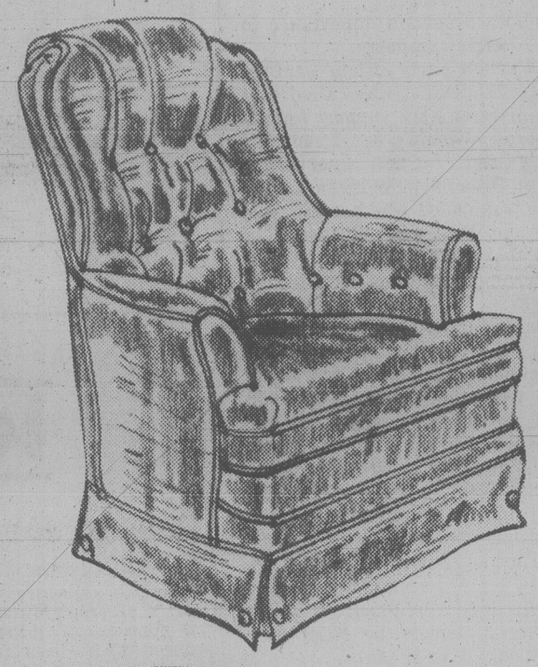

The Express said Callaghan's low-key "let's keep a good thing going" campaign "is paying dividends whereas the new and radical challenge offered by Mrs. Thatcher seems . . . to worry the voters."

A Gallup Poll in The Daily Telegraph put the Conservative lead at 4.5 percentage points — one-half point down on a Gallup survey a week ago.

The poll, conducted April 19-21, gave the Conservatives 46.5 per cent, Labor 42 and the Liberals 10. Gallup gave the Conservatives a 14.5-point lead in mid-March.

Both polls published today appear to support an opinion survey published during the weekend which indicated Labor is narrowing the gap

However, the papers noted that if the Conservatives can hold their present lead, Mrs. Thatcher would still occupy 10 Downing Street, the official residence of British prime ministers, next month with a comfortable overall majority in the 635-member House of Commons of around 12.

Some disturbing statements

It is unusual and presumptuous, to say the least, for a politician running for re-election to set conditions on his departure if the voters decide to throw him out.

And when that politician is Pierre Trudeau, and he keeps talking about how tough he is and how anyone who doesn't agree with him on national unity is practically a traitor, people start worrying about his commitment to orderly, democratic change under the parliamentary process.

Last week he said he "might" follow Mackenzie King's manoeuvre of half a century ago, when the Liberals, outnumbered 116 to 99 in the House of Commons after the 1925 election, clung to power for another year with the uneasy support of 65 Progressives from the prairies.

Monday night while flying to Cranbrook he told reporters that he would try to form a minority government even if the Tories win a "few" more seats than the Grits on May 22, which he subsequently defined as high as 10.

He said he would simply stay in office until forced to meet Parliament, then propose a legislative program "and see what Ed Broadbent would do. I'd be inclined to put our program to the test."

Liberal communications director Arnie Patterson said this was all hypothetical because the Liberals expect to form a majority government, but nonetheless Trudeau's remarks are alarming.

Given the mood of intense dissatisfaction of many, perhaps most Canadians after 11 years of Trudeau government, his determination to stay in office could precipitate a constitutional crisis like the King-Byng affair of 1926.

Any attempt to remain in office while Joe Clark clearly has a moral right to the job would work against national unity, not for it. Especially if the election turns out as predicted, with the Liberals retreating into a Quebec stronghold and practically shut out of the west.

If Trudeau carries through with his intention to disregard popular vote totals or number of seats in the Commons, it could also place intolerable strains on the office of Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer. There is the matter of Schreyer's recent status as a pillar of the NDP, which may hold the balance of power after the election, besides the extremely precarious position he would occupy as chief of state with an unpopular prime minister refusing to concede in favor of an opposition leader with more seats in the Commons.

The pressures of politics and public opinion could lead to a situation similar to that which occurred in Australia in 1975 when its governor-general dismissed Gough Whitlam's Labor administration — the first time anywhere in the Commonwealth in 200 years the Crown or its representative had fired a prime minister.

Trudeau's presumption of NDP support is based on the two years Liberals ruled with the socialists' help from 1972 to 1974. Now that does not seem so certain, although NDP leader Ed Broadbent has done his best to obscure his party's intentions. With Trudeau suddenly making it a significant issue, what Broadbent and his caucus will do assumes a certain importance in the election campaign.

A senior party official said before the election was called that the price of NDP support for the Liberals would be Trudeau's resignation. One interviewer asked Broadbent shortly after the vote was called whether this was true and he repled: "Yes, well, I said that in the context that it's his government that has been around 11 years. And a repudiation of the Liberal party in the coming election would also have to be seen as a personal repudiation." So far in the campaign itself, Broadbent has not directly answered the question. He has said repeatedly that "minority government is not on the ballot" and the NDP would confront the dilemma after the votes are counted.

This is rather too coy. If no party gathers a majority on May 22, Broadbent will exercise great influence though the NDP may have only 20 or 30 seats.

Trudeau's reference to Mackenzie King's actions in 1925 as support for his intentions is rather unfortunate. Not only King himself but eight of his cabinet ministers were defeated in the general election. Everyone but King himself recognized this decisive repudiation of policy and personalities.

More in the spirit of the parliamentary system was the decision of Louis St. Laurent to resign as prime minister when the 1957 election returned only 105 Liberal MPs to John Diefenbaker's 112.

For the good of the parliamentary system and for the country, if he finds himself in a similar position in four weeks, Prime Minister Trudeau must follow Louis St. Laurent's example.

No fumbles.

Rally to Joe, Bill

The Times on April 16 reports another attack (Minority Gov't Vote Would be 'Terrible Mistake') of our prime minister against Premier Peter Lougheed who has been often accused of provincialism.

It makes me wonder why Canada's most successful provincial leader is always Trudeau's target.

The PM has no hope, it is clear, to win any support in Alberta. Probably the only deal he made to attract Jack Horner to the fold will fall flat come May 22.

Alberta's premier has never used gimmicks in his campaigns. He hasn't had his greying hair touched up, nor has he indulged in being photographed in swim trunks or skiing outfit. Never has he appeared on television or in the press kissing girls or holding a baby.

He has been direct, forward, honest and most eloquent in defending the rights of Albertans both at home and in Ottawa.

Voters elsewhere in this country, including B.C., haven't been given enough credit for sorting out what is real, true and sincere from what is phoney and crafty.

We should all rally behind Joe Clark and Premier Bill Bennett in the same way and with the same loyalty, enthusiasm and trust as the Albertans did recently. It is the only way! — E. J. Lattes, 432 - 200 Dallas Road.

Got it backwards

I was absolutely amazed to read in the Times (April 17) that Mike Young made the following statement in his nomination speech for the Socred nomination in Victoria:

"If you really care for people you can't be for the NDP. Through taxation the NDP will give you the last dollar out of your own pocket."

The Socreds are presently offering all sorts of goodies to the electorate — over $200 million worth of goodies. Where did they get the money? Bill Bennett himself has made the statement: "There is no free lunch. The government has no money of its own. It collects and spends only as the agent of the people."

During the past three years the Socred government has been overtaxing. Sales tax went up to seven per cent from five per cent when they came to power. At the same time they increased the income tax, doubled the ferry rates; doubled, and, in some cases, tripled the ICBC premiums. While increasing taxes the Socred government reduced its share of educational costs, putting a heavier burden on the property taxpayer, and starved the hospitals to the point where hospital service has suffered.

In this way the Socred government managed to accumulate a surplus of $285 million in a period of three years. Now with the election on, they are returning much of this to the people as a cynical attempt to buy the votes. In other words it is the Socred government which is now offering "to give you the last dollar out of your own pocket."

Share in hand

Just listen to the NDP howl over the distribution of shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation! Talk about knee-jerk reaction!

Barrett says: "If we form the government we will stop the distribution — if it is too late, we will buy all the shares back."

Then, after discovering that the aforementioned statement had annoyed some of his faithful supporters, especially those who were publicly expressing regret that the NDP didn't first think of the distribution idea while in power, Barrett changes tack and says: "If we form the government we won't stop distribution, but it's a shameful waste because the people already own BCRIC."

The people are supposed to own everything in Russia too, and what good has it done them? Of a certainty there is no freedom of speech to know the truth!

A share in the hand is worth more to me than some socialistic ideology regarding benefits of communal ownership, so keep up the good work, Bill Bennett and the Social Credit government. — Nel Horth, 10837 Deep Cove Road.

Given too much?

I was very interested to read an account in your newspaper of a private school in Victoria that had been given a provincial government grant of $100,000 (It Started with a Prayer, But Critics Were Devilish; April 19).

I understand that monies were granted to private schools beause they were taking some of the burden of the enrolment off public schools, and were therefore relieving the public purse of some of the expense of public education.

The monies were requested by private schools because of inflation, and the schools were finding it difficult to meet their expenses.

However, the newspaper account states that $45,000 of the $100,000 granted to the school had been invested in a term deposit.

Surely this money was granted to the school for educational purposes and if $45,000 was in excess of its needs, it proves that the school was given too much of our tax money.

What is the criterion for the amount given to a private school, and how many private schools have been given an amount in excess of their needs?

Perhaps your newspaper should publish a full list of all schools receiving such grants and the amounts involved. I am looking forward to this.

Victoria school trustees are zealously chipping off, little by little, essential school requirements because of inadequate funds. Perhaps this $45,000 can be transferred to the Victoria school board. They could surely use it. — Rose Chope, 1028 Sutlej Street.

Broadbent's plan

Methinks your correspondent T. M. Dawson need only look in his mirror to find a hypocrite. Or perhaps he is just plain stupid. I refer to his letter (No Easy Answer) published in your newspaper on April 18.

The AIB was never empowered to control prices, only to monitor them. The success of the AIB's price monitoring efforts are well known. They were a miserable failure. Only in the area of wages (which they were legally empowered to control) were they able to hold down increases to a minimal six per cent. In the two-year period of the AIB's existence, wages remained stable despite a dramatic increase in prices.

On termination of the AIB, prices took off into the stratosphere with subsequent demands for wage increases which were justifiable under the circumstances. During their tenure, the AIB made no attempt to control prices because of political interference, which Mrs. Beryl Plumptre gave as her reason for resigning from the chairmanship of the AIB.

Briefly, the big boys told Trudeau to stop bugging them and the Prime Minister told Mrs. Plumptre to lay off. We now know (as we have suspected for some time) just who the government of Canada really is.

Wage and price controls? Certainly, as long as prices are kept on an even balance with wages so that when a wage earner is paid a dollar, he will be able to purchase a dollar's worth of goods. At present levels he is lucky if he can buy two bits worth of merchandise for his dollar. Certainly, the merchant has to make a profit. Those are his wages. But let's cut out the ripoff. That's what Mr. Broadbent means. — W. J. Fraser, 712 Yates Street.

Ministry of logging

A recent article in the Times (Environmentalists Backed Over Charlottes' Claim, April 11) revealed a report of the environment and land use secretariat which summarizes as follows: "Contrary to the claims of the forests ministry and logging companies, logging practices are not only destroying fish spawning grounds but reducing forest productivity."

I have noticed that when the provincial forests ministry must weigh logging potential against environmental impact, the environment appears to be given little or no consideration. In addition, it has been reported that such obviously important programs as reforestation are poorly emphasized.

In view of this, perhaps it would be in the interest of the logging companies, the government and the public to have a "ministry of logging" instead of a ministry of forests.

I realize that logging is an essential industry in the B.C. economy at present, and that resource exploitation necessitates environmental alterations, but I question what actions are being taken for the future. Inasmuch as the ministry of the environment often appears to only report on problems, the question of forest management must be directed to Forests Minister Tom Waterland.

Is our province destined to repeat the history of the east coast — where both the whaling industry and species of whales are extinct? Industries, governments, and even mankind may pass in time, but the environment must be protected and portions preserved, or there is no hope. — Douglas Power, 106-1019 Rockland.

In the future . . .

In Ask the Times in your paper of April 11, there was a question from W.J.E.: "Can you tell what is futurism. Is it a philosophy?" Your answer said futurism was a movement founded by F. T. Marinetti in 1909, which died with him in 1930. It sought to reform all arts and most human activities.

I wonder whether the futurism W.J.E. asked about was the futurism to which your answer related. There is great interest currently in studies of the future. Those who study the subject are called futurists and the subject itself is sometimes referred to as futurism although more often as future studies, futures research, or futuristics.

The World Future Society which was founded in 1966 has as members both individuals and business organizations, as well as educational institutions and departments of government. It is headquartered at 4916 St. Elmo Ave., Washington, D.C. 20014, U.S. and has chapters in at least 20 countries including Canada. Distinguished economists, scientists and businessmen are among its directors. The Futurist, a bimonthly publication of the society, is a journal of forecasts, trends and ideas about the future.

I note that the president of the World Future Society, Mr. Edward Cornish, has written an article entitled "Toward a Philosophy of Futurism" so it is possible that there is a growing consensus that the new discipline should be called futurism despite the earlier use of the name for the movement to which your answer referred.

To underline the acceptance of this new discipline it is of interest that the University of Houston now offers a Master of Science degree in Studies of the Future. It may also be of interest to your paper. that in Toronto from July 20-25 next year there will be an international futures conference incorporating the Third General Assembly of the World Future Society and the Fifth Annual Conference of the Canadian Association for Futures Studies. — Frederic R. Sherwood, 601-1420 Beach Drive.

TOM WICKER

George Wallace remembers

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The house at 3140 Fitzgerald Drive in this city's new Hillwood section could be any house in suburban America — dark brick, black blinds, brass carriage lamps, a spacious garage in the rear full of gleaming cars.

But 3140 Fitzgerald has a ramp instead of front steps and the doors are a little wider than customary. A black physical therapist named Eddie Holcey answers the door. He is a necessary fixture in the new, non-political life of George Corley Wallace — always a physical fitness buff and now a zealous follower of the exercises prescribed for a paraplegic's good health.

"Non-political," in George Wallace's case is of course a relative term. He tells with obvious emotion of his work for other paraplegics at the University of Alabama rehabilitation centre at Birmingham. And he is proud that students at the Montgomery campus of Auburn University are basing a study of third parties on his 1968 experience and listening to his lectures on the subject.

But a man who has eaten, slept, talked, smoked and breathed politics for most of his 59 years could no more kick the habit, just because he's been out of office a couple of months, than a hound dog could quit howling and scratching.

"Oh, I ain't sayin' I ain't gonna run again," he tells an old but friendly antagonist. "But it's awful hard to get around like this." With the stump of a cigar in a plastic holder, he indicates his inert legs. "Maybe if it was something that you could win pretty easy, without much of a campaign. But if it was gonna be a hard race, I just wouldn't be up to it."

This is early afternoon and George Wallace — four times a presidential candidate, governor of Alabama from 1963 through 1978 (with the exception of the term of his late wife, Lurleen, completed by her lieutenant-governor) — is taking it easy on a single bed in his dressing room. But he is fully clothed in blue, including a snappy necktie; his cuff links and tie-clasp display the state seal, as does the rug on the floor; and his hair is roached straight back in the familiar Wallace style.

"Yeah," he says, as if resuming an only recently interrupted conversation, "now they all sayin' ev'rything I used to say, ain't they? Talkin' bout bureaucrats, inflation, taxes, savin' the middle class." He does not mention race and his visitor refrains from saying that a lot of "them" are beginning to sound like George Wallace on that issue, too.

"Now you from North Ca'lina," Wallace says. "Take that university up there, got the HEW tryin' to tear it down. All them professors used to turn up their noses at me, they sayin' just what I use to say 'bout the HEW now."

GEORGE WALLACE
. . . still watches politics

This brings on a happy reminiscence of his victory over Terry Sanford in the North Carolina primary of 1972 — "I'd of been on the ticket that year, I hadn't got shot." Thinking he meant that he would have been the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, his visitor agrees that that was possible.

But it turns out that Wallace thinks now he would have been nominated for president, had it not been for the attempt on his life that put him in a wheelchair. And he is confident that he would have beaten Richard Nixon — "he only got that landslide from all them Democrats that couldn't stand McGovern."

That 1972 campaign seems fresh as Alabama's spring flowers in George Wallace's overflowing memory. With rich detail, he tells of having awakened from his ordeal in the hospital to hear Walter Cronkite describing how he'd split the delegates in the New Mexico primary with George McGovern. And with obvious satisfaction, he recalls McGovern telephoning him three times that fall to plead for his endorsement.

"Said I was the key to the campaign," Wallace says, stabbing at a new cigar with a flaring butane flame. "Said I could win it for him, so many folks wanted to know where I stood." He pauses for effect. "I told him I'd consider it."

Supports Carter

The governor, as everyone still calls him, does not dwell as lovingly on the 1976 campaign, in which his national career came to an end. But he is remarkably supportive of Jimmy Carter, his southern rival of that year. It "took a lot of guts" for Carter to go to the Middle East, he says, and "I was realy pullin' for him 'cause I was pullin' for my country."

He admires Carter's intellect and "principles" but — with that hard Wallace political acumen — says the president "needs to show more confidence.

"Now you take FDR. You weren't no better off in '36 than you was in '32 but he made you think you was."

He doubts, however, that the south will rally around Carter again in 1980. "We proved once a southerner could be elected," George Wallace says, with the first trace of wistfulness in a hour's talk. "We don't have to do that again."

Turning free enterprise into One Big Company

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Express

There is sad news, there is ominous news, there is bad news, but lately the news has been just bloody awful.

People aren't screaming, because the pain hasn't reached them yet. When it does, then we'll cry about what has already happened to us.

What news is this? Not the political news, that comes and goes.

The terrible news, which has hit us just about every week this year, is the news of giant companies which are swallowing up other large companies.

There seems no end to the process.

First, in an interesting act of economic cannibalism, we found Fields department store swallowing Fields.

Then the Weston and the Thomson interests fought for Hudson's Bay-Simpsons-Zellers-Fields, all for the greater good of the Thomson and Weston shareholders and to the greater dismay of Parliament, which didn't know what to do about it, and of you and me who are the customers of that comfortable family of department stores.

In the case of Thomson, which turned out to be the strongest contender for the Bay purchase, no evidence has been offered that it is fit to render the store customers better service or lower prices.

The corporation was begun by Lord Thomson of Fleet while he was still Roy Thomson of Sudbury. He was an avid newspaper collector.

He never showed much interest in what the newspapers were like. He just enjoyed owning a lot of them.

(After Senator Keith Davey ended his inquiry into the Canadian newspaper industry he was asked to name the worst newspapers in the country. "Oh, any two Thomson papers," was Senator Davey's reply.)

There are any number of other mergers in the making.

A major one is the Brascan effort to buy control of the old Woolworth chain in the United States. Brascan has $425 million loose change at the moment, money paid it by the Brazilian government when it nationalized the Brascan power utility in that country.

Does it matter to you and me if Brascan uses its $425 million to buy a store chain in another country? It's their money, isn't it?

The bid for Woolworth's is more than a billion dollars, so Brascan would put up less than half. Seven hundred million of the purchase price would be provided Brascan by the bankers.

The banks have a lot of your money and mine on deposit and want to do something useful with it.

Doing something useful includes lending a bit back to us, untidy and unbusinesslike men, although they, too, are not entirely suitable people.

A small businessman is noted for having dreams not suitable to his station in life. He does not fit handily into the moulds cast for him by modern business and government bureaucrats. Small businessmen are unsettling people.

To a bank, the ideal use for a big bundle of money is to lend it to an outfit like Brascan which, by building hydro dams in Brazil, has proven its ability to run a five-and-ten-cent store chain.

So eager are banks for customers such as Brascan that they will lend money to them at rates far lower than individuals or small enterprises could ever expect to enjoy.

We seem hell bent on turning the so-called free enterprise system into One Big Company.

It is fatuous to suggest that big companies are more efficient than small ones. Rarely, if ever, does that claim stand up to dispassionate scrutiny.

Big companies are more enduring than small ones, and they therefore give the appearance of greater efficiency.

There are two reasons for this spurious reputation for efficiency and neither has anything to do with the quality of the product they make or the service they give their customers.

One reason is that big companies have easier access to credit than small ones. They can borrow money cheaper.

They can borrow it in sufficient quantity to tide them over periods of business reverses, which afflict every enterprise sooner or later.

Also, they can use that reserve of credit while undercutting a small competitor and driving him out of competition.

The other advantage accruing to big companies is that, once a certain size is reached, they attain a form of immortality.

So many jobs, so many service industries, so many towns and cities become dependent on the health of the big company that governments can never afford to let one die.

Governments will invariably do for a company with 10,000 employees what they would never do for companies who hire only 10.

Neither of their spurious forms of efficiency does much for the customer. Neither encourages competition, which is supposed to be the mainspring of the capitalist system.

They foresee that eventually they will elect governments which will seize these great corporations and use them for the greater good and glory of the common man. Something along the line of what we have already accomplished with the post office, no doubt.

Private or public ownership is not the main concern.

The concern is about bigness itself, bigness which stifles initiative, quenches competition, centralizes wealth and power, breeds hierarchical bureaucracies and bosses the customers which the company was originally made to serve.

Given time, these sluggish monsters of the economic world may die of fatty degeneration of the soul. It may be a long wait.

Meanwhile, the health of the small, resourceful, independent enterprises grows worse and the control of the individual citizen over his personal economic affairs ever weaker.

THE ECONOMIST

The world today is an unequal place; among unequals, women are the most unequal — the poorest of the poor. A United Nations office, called the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, is now assembling evidence to show just how unequal women, and particularly third-world women, are. Take education: parity between boys and girls in primary school enrolment has so far been achieved in only 14 countries. In a number of developing countries, the proportion of girls attending primary schools is still under 10 per cent. As a result, out of an estimated 700 million illiterates, nearly two thirds are females.

Just as educationists pass women by on the other side of the road, so also do development planners. The UN centre points out that women are in effect invisible to most third-world economists. In Africa, where 80 per cent of women still live in the rural areas, it is estimated that 60-80 per cent of all agricultural work is done by them. But the women's work is subsistence agriculture which, like housekeeping in industrial countries, is outside the commercial sector and therefore does not figure in national statistics.

A report by the UN Economic Commission for African comments:

> "A male worker laying a pipe to a house in the city is considered to be economically active; a woman carrying a 40 kilo water jar for one or two hours a day is just doing a household task."

More is at stake than "woman's rights". As subsistence farmers, it is women who provide the food that the poor actually eat. If development is a process meant to benefit the poor, then it would follow that planners should pay more attention to the subsistence sector, to its economic contribution and to the people who work in it. Yet, to take just one example from many, Algeria's figures on the "economically active" do not, according to study by the International Labor Organization, include 1.2 million females occupied in subsistence agriculture.

Development projects and programs inevitably concentrate on the economically active. In Africa as a whole, UN figures show an increase of 1.2 per cent a year in total food production over the period 1970-74 but a decrease of 1.4 per cent in food production per head. There are soon going to be, literally, more people than hot dinners. The result, as in the Sahel famines of the early 1970s, can be starvation. The Economic Commission for Africa noted that "despite this ominous food supply situation, until very recently there has been little more than a whisper of attention to the high labor input and low productivity which characterizes food production — mainly the work of women." The most fertile land and the largest share of agricultural incentives are usually allocated to cash crops — in other words to men.

All too often "modernizing influences" have failed to benefit women and have, at times, attracted their hostility or even outright opposition. An irrigated rice settlement scheme in Kenya provoked this comment:

> "There is no wood for fuel, or adequate space for women to grow food. They also have to work long hours on rice fields as virtual servants to their husbands who control the fields. At the end of the day the men receive all the income from their own and their wives' labor . . . The women, reduced to begging money from their husbands to buy wood and food, are resentful about the whole rice project to the point of outright hostility, and they regard it as a place to leave as soon as possible."

In Upper Volta, pilot resettlement schemes for the Volta Valley Authority, designed as models for some multi-million dollar projects financed by the World Bank and others, have been found to be nearly intolerable to the women because of the lack of basic facilities, such as market places, land to grow the family's food, village wells, grain mills and other facilities regarded as essentials in their home village. Many women have insisted on leaving.

The period 1976-85 is officially designated the UN's Decade for Women. The 10 years are supposed to be "a period for action, an opportunity and a challenge". Well, at least something is being done. Regional and national commissions on women and development have been set up in most countries to encourage governments to think more clearly about women's role and economic importance. A "voluntary fund" currently worth about $6 million is meant to give muscle to projects and programs that will benefit women. An international institute has been established to conduct research into the relationship between underdevelopment and the status of women and to provide training to help women play a more active part in their country's decision-making process. In the summer of 1980, a world conference will review progress and formulate a plan of action to 1985. By then, with a little bit of luck, the invisible woman should be a bit easier to see.

Hair, hide and eyeballs

Science News:

Scientists at Jessup laboratories have completed a 10-year study of horse hair with arresting results. The project began in 1969 when a single horse hair was immersed in a solution of orange juice and cod liver oil to determine whether long exposure to distasteful mixtures could produce a chain reaction.

Recently, the hair — a two-foot strand from the tail of an ordinary plow horse — was removed from the solution and subjected to laser analysis. Hopes that marinated horse hair might provide a cheap source of energy were dashed when the tests showed that though the hair had deteriorated and developed a severe case of dandruff, it was in no mood to produce the all-important chain reaction.

During the analyis, however, scientists discovered that the laser beam used to test the hair subsequently projected an unbearable stench to everything it touched within a range of 2,000 miles. Scientists believe they have accidentally discovered a new weapon that can make large areas of the earth uninhabitable without causing human injury or loss of life.

Persons who fear that prolonged reading of the unabridged edition of Webster's Third New International dictionary may cause near-sightedness can now rest easily. Scientists at Oaksap University report that laboratory mice that have been exposed to the entire volume for "a" to "zyzzogeton" suffered no significant visual impairment.

They did, however, develop symptoms of extreme lethargy as early as "decastich" (poem of stanza of 10 lines) and were too spent at the end to grasp the fact that "zyssogeton" refers to a genus of large South American leafhoppers having the pronotum tuberculate and the front tibiae grooved.

Do you lose your temper and curse when you discover you have lost your eyeglasses? A three-year study by the National Institute of Eyeglasses shows that this is because you are not carrying a spare pair of spectacles. Psychologists have proven statistically that persons who lose their only set of eyeglasses are four times more likely to utter curses and lapse into paranoidal depression than those who have back-up glasses readily at hand.

Geographers have wondered for years why the troubled Middle East is troubled while a region such as the Orient, which ought to be troubled, is merely inscrutable. To test the theory that certain land formations have trouble built into their geological components, while others have only inscrutability, the Dortmund Geographic Society wants to excavate a hundred square miles of the Middle East to a depth of 12,000 feet and move it to Tibet for a 20-year study.

Because of the project's expense, the society has applied to the Ford Foundation for a grant. It has also promised the Middle East that the transported land segment will be returned immediately if Tibet strikes oil.

For trend-setters, there is alarming news from Mount Siwatch. The giant 90-foot telescope, capable of scanning the outer edges of the universe, has detected no new trends within 18 months of the earth.

Astonomers and trend followers have noticed an alarming paucity of new trends for the past two years, but until now this has been ascribed to the Carter administration's tendency to produce a listless side effect known in scientific parlance as "tedium."

The latest astronomical studies, however, suggest that the earth may be travelling through a rare trend-free zone in the galaxy. Some scientists theorize that these scattered trend-free zones, like the notorious black holes in space, bob around in the universe without much purpose except to amuse themselves by confounding scientists.

The trend-free zone, however, is even more troubling to both trend setters and trend followers, who are left at wit's end about what to do with themselves when they are not sleeping. Astonomers believe this is the first trend-free zone the earth has passed through since 1904, although other astronomers believe it is all a lot of nonsense.

A statistical survey conducted by Burr University reports overwhelming evidence that healthy, young males more than 6 feet 10 inches tall are more likely to become successful basketball players than Olympic diving champions.

Prof. E.J. Dimbach's effort to improve the public's opinion of the rhinoceros has suffered a setback. The common notion of the rhinoceros as a dangerous, short-tempered, armor-plated monster is nonsense, says the professor, who has succeeded in domesticating three of the large beasts so successfully that he calls them Bertha, Pearl and Hamilton and always lets one of them sleep on the foot of his bed.

Recently Professor Dimbach successfully saddled Pearl and rode her from Wilmington, Del. to the Pentagon to dramatize his case for a new kind of U.S. cavalry, or, as he calls it, a "Rhinoceroly." The Pentagon rejected the proposal when, in tests, Pearl roared, bolted and charged the Washington Monument after being subjected to a laser beam that had been used to analyze horse hair marinated for 10 years in cod liver oil and orange juice.

Vancouver Firms Taking a Flyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — With their two daily newspapers out on strike for nearly six months now, Vancouver residents are finding their mailboxes jammed with flyers.

They are also finding themselves reading some weekly and semi-weekly newspapers they had never seen before.

Major retailers say flyiers are the best method to get their advertsising messages across, although there are problems.

Earl Pasquill, merchandising services manager for Eaton's, also relies heavily on flyers but admits there are drawbacks.

He said stores tend to group too much advertising in a flyer, advertising that would be spread out over several editions of a newspaper. In addition, newspapers provide better coverage of a market than do flyers.

"I'm inclined to think we could have done better with newspapers but our sales have been reasonable despite those constraints," he said.

"Because of the large bundles of flyers people are receiving, a person has to be a Sears customer or or a Bay customer or whatever for them to be read," said Mac McNally, advertising manager for Simpsons-Sears. "If they are not a Sears customer, they will just toss the flyer out."

McNally said the flyers are not attracting new customers the way newspaper advertisments would but business has not suffered in the company's five Vancouver-area stores. Sears has increased its radio and television advertising budget by 15 per cent because of the newspaper strike.

John McLean, advertising manager for the Bay, also said business remains strong despite the lack of daily newspapers but the company has found it is harder to cover the market for its downtown store.

"The big guys have benefitted from the strike more than the little guys," he said in an interview.

"A smaller store might have 25 per cent off on sweaters but it would have difficulty getting its message across. People will go to a department store because they know they got something happening."

He said that to catch the customer's eye and keep Bay flyers out of the fireplace before they are read, the publications have gone through design changes to make them look like a newspaper.

And while Vancouverites hear classified advertisements sandwiched around pop tunes on a local rock station, they still have newspapers to read.

The Columbian, a New Westminster daily, has made heavy gains without entering the Vancouver market itself, publisher Rikk Taylor said Tuesday.

He said circulation is approaching 55,000 compared with a pre-strike figure of 30,000. The average number of pages each day has gone to 40 from 24.

"I don't see us falling too much after the strike, either," Taylor said in an interview.

The Courier, once a weekly which served the city's West End, now is distributed from suburban Burnaby to Horseshoe Bay in West Vancouver. It has gone from one edition of 35,000 to 40,000 copies containing an average of 36 pages to two editions of 60,000 copies containing an average of 136 pages.

New weekly newspapers have emerged since the strike began and others find they are producing up to the capacity of their equipment.

While Victoria and Seattle papers have not made a major push in the Vancouver market, Toronto Globe and Mail has increased its allotment to outlets here by 2,500 to a total of 3,300 a day. The Globe had 5,000 copies of its Report on Business delivered here each day before the strike and that figure has remained the same.

Another paper that is growing is the thrice-weekly Express published by Pacific Press employees and printed on the same press as the New Westminster Columbian.

The first edition had 16 pages. Today, the average is about 32 and Friday editions reach 48 pages with a press run of 100,000.

The Sun had a circulation of 252,000 and The Province was about 132,000 on weekdays and 148,000 on Saturdays.

Money from Express sales and revenue from the 60 per cent of the paper that is advertising, supplements the joint council's strike fund for the 1,400 workers.

Payments are based on a percentage of a worker's pre-strike salary. Although they were lower at the beginning of the strike, a senior reporter earning about $400 a week at the evening Sun, now is getting about $175 to $180 a week in strike benefits.

The newspaper had to scramble for such things as typewriters and desks when it started, but today its reporters are travelling with federal and provincial party leaders on election campaigns, an expensive move that means less for the strike fund.

There is less chaos in the newsroom as putting out the paper is becoming more routine.

Pacific Press Unions Split over Dispute

the strike, Pacific Press wants a settlement that would forestall protracted manning disputes in the future rather than a short-term settlement.

He also says the company "does not want to waver from its position in the face of a strike since to do so would show weakness in other disputes at other properties."

The report says three recent weeks of negotiations have been fruitful for establishing the positions of both sides.

"But what is lacking is the willingness of the (pressmen's) union to move into the same dimension of discussion as the employer.

"The moves by the union have been far too small in light of what it seeks for (the members) — job guarantees and a moratorium on future manning negotiations.

"Thus, there has been a failure on the part of the union to evaluate the value of these items in light of their impact on the employer and its goals.

"And, these are not as valuable to the union as they might seem since pressmen, liking the old system, are content to absorb risks such as layoffs as a fact of life."

The company says the current manning clause is uneconomic and prevents it from competing with suburban newspapers for lucrative advertising supplements.

Sun publisher Clark Davey said Sunday the unions rejected a proposal to submit to compulsory arbitration and go back to work. He also confirmed the company rejected a union offer to turn the pressroom manning issue over to a union-management committee.

Bill Solberg, a spokesman for the Vancouver Printing Pressmen and Offset Workers Union, also said Sunday his members are standing firm and want a meeting with members of the other five unions at Pacific Press to demonstrate their solidarity.

But Jim Young, a spokesman for the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild which represents 800 of the 1,400 Pacific Press employees, said if the pressmen stand firm, the guild will go to its membership for a decision on his union's next move.

Audrey Robertson grins after council's change of heart

Bylaw Bent for Animals in Back Yard

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Audrey Robertson, 68, can maintain a modified backyard barnyard in spite of city bylaws, council has decided.

She told council that she keeps the dozen chickens and three goats for milk and eggs to minister to a number of infirmities she and her 80-year-old husband are afflicted with. She did not elaborate.

Council became involved after someone in the neighborhood complained about the smell of her backyard menagerie and city officials told her to remove the animals to comply with bylaws.

Alderman Dale Steward told council Monday, however, that he couldn't find the neighbor that was bothered by the animals. He said that on one side of the Robertson's property, there is a vacant lot and on the other, the residents are absent most of the time.

$650,000 Surplus Aid In Coquitlam Tax-Cut

COQUITLAM (CP) — Municipal taxes will be reduced this year because this municipality ended 1978 with almost $650,000 in the bank.

Mayor Jim Tonn said the average homeowner's taxes will decrease 11.3 per cent.

Council is aiming at a $15.9 million balanced budget this year, an increase of three per cent that falls within the provincial government's five per cent ceiling on municipal budget increases.

Tonn said that an improved tax base together with the surplus means the increased budget can be met with a tax rate reduction of almost five mills.

Gunfight Charges

BURNABY (UPC) — A man was charged with two counts of attempted murder and four other people face weapons and stolen property charges in the wake of a gunfight late Sunday that wounded two RCMP officers and one suspect.

RCMP said today Const. John Buis, 25, was in good condition in hospital with a shotgun wound to his leg. Const. John Robinson, 27, was released after shotgun pellets were removed from his body.

Guylay was charged with two counts of attempted murder and three weapons charges — possession of a dangerous weapon, possession of a concealed weapon and carrying a restricted weapon without a permit.

The two RCMP officers had stopped a car for a routine check in downtown Burnaby Sunday night when one of its occupants opened fire with a shotgun. The policemen returned fire and arrested the seven occupants of the car. Two of them, found to be hitchhikers, were released without being charged.

The car was stolen and had Texas licence plates.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Both sides involved in the shutdown of Endako molybdenum mine near Fraser Lake have agreed to resume bargaining, mine manager Mel Thompson said Tuesday.

Negotiators for Placer Development Ltd. and the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers are to meet mediator Ken Albertini here next Tuesday.

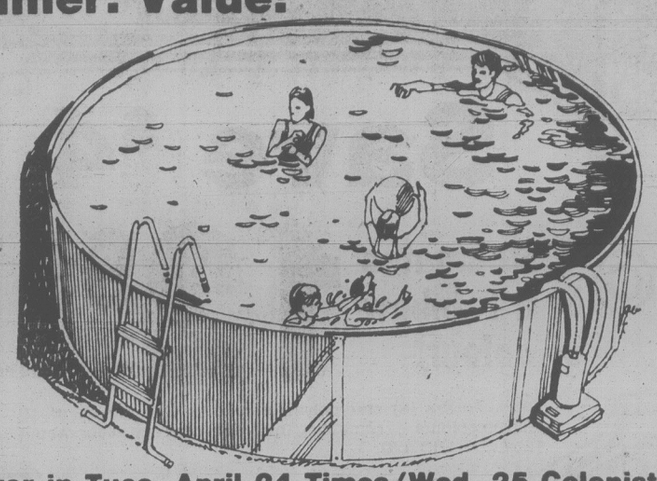

Meanwhile, the British Columbia council of the Canadian Confederation of Unions has asked organized workers not to handle Endako products.

80s Look Bright For Mine Industry

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite its poor earnings record in the 1970s, the Canadian mining industry is expected to have little trouble raising the large amount of capital it needs for expansion in the 1980s.

Analysts and industry experts agreed at a recent mining conference that economic, political and investment trends are all swinging to support the mining industry.

"The climate for raising mining capital in Canada during the '80s promises to be highly favorable," said Anthony Hepburn, president of Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd. in Vancouver.

Hepburn said mining's capital needs of close to $120 billion in the next decade will have to compete with $900 billion in capital requirements of other sectors, but he predicted that mining will do well in that competition:

"Provided recent favorable trends toward risk capital continue, and assuming the mining industry adopts some new financing techniques, there should be no serious problem in attracting sufficient risk capital from domestic and foreign sources to finance the massive program of mining exploration and development which lies ahead in the '80s."

Michael Harrison, vice-president of Walwyn Stodgell Cochran Murray Ltd. of Toronto, said one good opportunity for mining to raise capital is through the same kind of tax-shelter fund that has brought much new investment into the petroleum industry.

Investors were attracted by the fact that they could make a slight profit because of tax incentives, even on exploration ventures that found nothing.

But, Harrison said, petroleum companies were getting so much investment in this manner that they recently began reducing benefits received by investors in the exploration funds:

"They started to get a bit chintzy and what happened? They killed the golden goose.

"So the money is still available and it's looking around for a new game."

That money, he said, is being attracted to mining because of good prospects for the industry and because the length of time an investor must wait for a profit has shortened in mining compared with petroleum.

If someone invests in an oil exploration fund for Beaufort Sea work, Harrison said, his grandchildren may see production from those Arctic wells.

Recruiters Fighting Mines 'Bad Image'

By ESTELLE DORAIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's $21-billion mining industry is facing severe recruitment problems because no one wants to work in the mines, the chief executive officer of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. said Monday.

Ronald Fraser told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy that if money was the overriding problem of the 1970s, recruitment may well be the obsession of the 1980s.

"Basically, the matter resolves itself into three questions. How do we get people into mining? How do we keep them there? And, how do we get the best contribution out of the people we have?"

The industry had no problems during the Great Depression and during the immigration that followed the Second World War, but "there doesn't seem to have been a new wave of this sort in the 1960s and the 1970s," Fraser said.

The attractions of city living, the lessening stigma of being unemployed and the mining industry's bad image as greedy, insensitive and foreign have combined to keep people away, said the South African who came to Canada seven years ago by way of England.

"One of the problems the industry will probably have to face is the selective competion for skilled artisans as Northern pipeline projects and perhaps vast new tar sands operations get under way and create a demand for the type of skilled labor already short in mining areas."

One solution, Fraser said, is to recognize the problem early and step up artisan training programs. But basically, it's no use asking where the miners have gone, he concluded, "we have to go out and find them."

Oil Price To Keep Climbing?

MONTREAL (CP) — Oil prices over the next 10 to 15 years will be at least in line with the inflation rate, the executive director of the Canadian Energy Research Institute says.

John Dawson told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy that Canadian oil prices by the beginning of next year will still be below prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Two price increases of $1.00 a barrel are scheduled here between now and then with increases in U.S. dollar prices currently expected to amount to about 25 per cent, Dawson said.

"Barring major continuous disruptions in production, there will probably be adequate supplies of oil until the late 1980s with world economic growth averaging 3.5 per cent per annum as compared with 4.5 per cent in the decade prior to 1973," he said.

Although shifts to other sources of energy during the next 10 to 15 years will become more evident, they are unlikely to be dramatic because alternatives are expensive and it is difficult to substitute for oil in certain uses of energy, especially as a fuel for motor vehicles.

New Lifestyles Affecting Retailers

REGINA (CP) — Changing lifestyles and work patterns resulting in more women in the work force are profoundly affecting the retail industry, says a senior F. W. Wooolworth Ltd. executive.

Keith Elliott, director of public relations and consumer affairs with Woolworth, said here that retailers have been forced to react to societal changes.

He said today's consumer is not necessarily buying less than those of a decade or two ago but the present generation may be more concerned about the quality of life.

Tendencies were to spend more on such services as eating out, vacations, travel and educational opportunities. There was increased competition between goods and experiences for the consumer dollar.

"All trends, of course, are cyclical, but there are not many signs right now of any important shift away from this emphasis on the quality of life," Elliott said.

Receiver Appointed

TORONTO (CP) — The Supreme Court of Ontario has appointed Clarkson Co. Ltd. of Toronto as the permanent receiver and manager of All-Can Holdings Ltd. of Toronto, the Ontario Securities Commission announced Monday.

The commission said in a statement that the court also ordered on Monday that Leslie Allen, All-Can's president and chief executive officer, and Harry J. Allen Jr., the company's secretary, refrain from managing All-Can or from dealing with the property, assets and contracts of the company and its subsidiaries.

The two men were charged April 4 with conspiring to affect the market price of All-Can's non-voting class B shares. Also charged was Morton J. Goldhar, president of Pennant Resources Ltd. and Medicorp Technology Ltd., both of Toronto.

Carter Pulls Rug Out From Under Advisers

By ART PINE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has opened itself to a new — and potentially serious — question: Do the president and his top economic policy-makers actually have their act together as the administration has been claiming since last November's dramatic dollar-rescue effort?

The question arises as a result of the administration's extraordinary display over the past two weeks in connection with a Treasury-backed campaign to prod the Federal Reserve Board into raising interest rates as a device to help slow the overheating economy.

In a mind-boggling round of manoeuvres, Carter abruptly pulled the rug from under his top economic advisers, badly undercut his own secretary of the Treasury as head of the administration's economic team and summarily barred any high-level review of the proposals — all virtually in full public view.

Almost as stunning were appearances of serious chinks in the relationship between the president's policy-making team and the Carter-appointed chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, G. William Miller — whom White House advisers cite as the man who prompted the president to act in the first place.

Until last week, outsiders presumed that the two sides were working in tandems — through weekly luncheon meetings between Miller and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who led the administration's campaign for higher interest rates. Carter's political lieutenants were taking a back seat.

But last week's saga provided some hints that the earlier Treasury-Fed accord had become mired in a series of memoranda, notes, end-run attempts and pressure tactics not generally seen here since the Johnson administration was openly warring with then-Fed chairman William McC. Martin.

In short, the U.S. economic policy-making apparatus was back in disarray.

The spectacle began benignly enough about a month ago, when Blumenthal and some key aides began worrying that the industrial sector of the economy might be overheating — a concern that now is shared by many nongovernment economists as well.

The fear was that the unexpected boom was causing excess demand and exacerbating inflationary pressures. The administration's new wage-price guidelines, designed to work only in a period of relative slack, were being strained to the breaking point. Prices were going through the roof.

Worried that continuation of the boom might "rachet up" the rate of inflation — and possibily result in a deeper slump later this year — Blumenthal began pushing to tighten present policy. The budget was too hard to change and too slow in taking effect. Interest rates seemed the quickest course.

At first, other Carter advisers were reluctant, fearing that a sharp rise in interest rates would bring on a deeper downturn. But when new figures showed continued high inflation and overheating, the economic policy team began to panic. Ultimately, only Labor Secretary Ray Marshall demurred.

When top Carter economist Charles L. Schultze ultimately acquiesced, it was viewed a major turning point by key administration advisers — marking a belief that the overheating was so potentially dangerous that policy-makers now were willing to risk a recession in order to dampen the current excess demand.

Although an interest rate rise might not bite hard immediately, Blumenthal argued it would "send a signal" to big business that were borrowing heavily to finance excessive inventory buildups. Reportedly, he urged a rise of half a percentage point, the minimum amount that analysts said would have any effect.

After stories leaked out about the economic advisers consensus, Blumenthal decided to float the idea more publicly. In a speech prepared for delivery in Dallas, the Treasury secretary referred openly to the possibility that the administration may have to "risk" recession to slow inflation.

But the speech, while widely distributed here, never was delivered as written. At the last minute, Blumenthal deleted the key paragraphs, without notifying reporters back in Washington. The pronouncements made the headlines anyway, but Blumenthal technically was off the hook.

The policy recommendations, however, apparently never made it to Carter for a normal review — or even to the traditional channels of the administration's Economic Policy Group, the Cabinet-level policy-making group that provides background and formal recommendations on economic proposals.

Instead, without any further consultations, Carter sent terse notes to Blumenthal and Schultze ordering them to drop the subject entirely. According to key White House political lieutenants, the president also groused pointedly that his advisers too often had been wrong about the economy's resiliency.

The White House side of the story was that Carter had reacted to a complaint from Miller, who supposedly called the president directly to complain that the pressure was interfering with the Fed's traditional independence. Fed sources, however, insist Miller made no such call.

At a press conference a few days earlier, Carter confidently predicted that inflation soon would slow and the economy would emerge in good shape — publicly disputing warnings by his advisers that the new round of overheating was threatening to keep the price spiral alive.

That Friday morning, an obviously muzzled Blumenthal appeared at a meeting with reporters where he was suspiciously reluctant even to discuss the notion of raising interest rates. "I never have publicly called for an increase in interest rates," he asserted. "I think present policy is right on track."

Blumenthal's argument was that the overheating was serious, and is not ebbing rapidly enough. His fear was that unless some action were taken soon, inflation would worsen and inventory-building would accelerate — paving the way for a steeper downturn.

Miller took the opposite tack. To him, the economy was showing signs of slowing down a bit, and to boost interest rates now would risk pushing the economy into a recession. Both fiscal and monetary policy already had turned restrictive. If a recession did come, Miller didn't want the Fed to be blamed.

By the end of last week, it was clear that Miller had prevailed. After a meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the Fed's chief policy-setting panel, the markets showed no signs of upward pressure on interest rates. If the Fed has decided to tighten further, the signs are yet to come.

4M Chinese Want Jobs

PEKING (AP) — About four million of China's 900 million people are unemployed and lack of jobs sometimes has resulted in "disturbances," Vice Premier Li Xiannian (Li Hsiennien) told U.S. representatives.

Representative John Erlenborn (Rep. Ill.) reported the Chinese blamed the unemployment on the disruptions of the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution and that steps are being taken to reduce the number of jobless.

He said Li also said six million students took college entrance examinations last year but only 400,000 were admitted because of a lack of space.

Socreds Demand Proof from Paskin

The president of the Social Credit party in Cowichan-Malahat said Tuesday any member of his party making threats to other candidates should be turfed out of the organization.

But, Bob Kennedy added, the proof would have to rest with the courts.

Kennedy was replying to accusations by Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin that a prominent member of the Socred party had threatened him with physical harm if he ran as the Conservative candidate in the upcoming provincial election.

Paskin announced his candidacy Monday.

"We aren't going to do anything," Kennedy said. "It's up to Paskin. If he thinks he's an injured party he should do something about it."

Although Socred candidate Rex Hollett says the entry of a Conservative candidate will hurt his election chances, Kennedy doesn't agree.

"I really don't think it's going to make that much difference," he said. "We were prepared for a Liberal candidate, but instead we got a Conservative one. That's no great concern to us."

However, Paskin appeared to score points with a crowd of about 500 who attended an all-candidates meeting at the Village Green Inn in Duncan Tuesday night, the first of three such meetings planned this week in the riding.

He was greeted with applause when he said he was running to provide the voters with an option to the NDP and Socreds.

He denied a suggestion he would split the free enterprise vote.

"I happen to believe everyone should have a free choice," he said. "Whether I split the NDP or Socred vote is beside the point. Frankly I don't give a damn."

In Nanaimo, Tory candidate James Alcorn, 70, says he's been forced to withdraw because of a lack of support from the provincial and federal Tories in the riding.

A party spokesman said Alcorn lost support when it was learned he had had a number of heart attacks. The party members didn't feel his health was adequate, he said.

"I'm a fighter," Alcorn said. "But my party didn't even allow me to put on my gloves before I was out on a TKO."

Leaders to Vie for Crowd

A showdown battle of the crowds will be waged by Social Credit and the NDP in Memorial Arena next week as a local climax to the provincial election campaign.

Premier Bennett will speak May 1 while NDP leader Dave Barrett will appear May 6.

It will be the first time Social Credit has used the arena and should set a party record for attendance at a rally in this district, according to Victoria campaign organizer Eric Charman.

"Even if we draw only 3,200, it will be a record for the party. I expect it will be much higher than that."

In all previous campaigns the party has used the Royal or McPherson theatres or local high schools.

About 7,000 can be jammed into the arena but comfortable seating for a political rally totals about 4,000.

The Social Credit rally on Tuesday will have only one speaker, the premier. Doors open at 6:45 p.m. and entertainment will start at 7. The premier's speech starts at 8 p.m.

The NDP has drawn crowds of about 4,000 at the arena in previous campaigns. All NDP candidates in southern Vancouver Island ridings will be present on May 6, along with their campaign supporters.

Meanwhile, a series of all—candidate meetings have been planned for the local campaign.

Channel 10 TV will host four of them, starting Tuesday, May 1. All are at 7:30 p.m.

90% of Fish Processers Fronting for Japan: Lea

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — NDP fisheries critic Graham Lea said Tuesday that 90 per cent of B.C.'s 60 fish processing plants are fronting for Japanese investors.

An NDP government would hold a public inquiry into the fishing industry to determine the extent of Japanese control, Lea told a news conference in this central coast community.

He said the situation results from inept licensing of processing plants by the Social Credit government.

Lea said that 254 processing licences were issued last year, and 345 this year. The marine resources branch had said the industry cannot sustain that many operations.

"Many of these new processing licences have been specifically set up to do nothing more than to act as agents for Japanese front money," he said.

Hundreds of jobs were being lost because the Japanese-backed companies were doing only partial processing of herring roe, then shipping it overseas for grading.

Lea said the NDP would insist that licences be granted only to companies processing their catches in B.C.

He said this would virtually eliminate cash buying on the fishing grounds, which has resulted in diminished supplies of fish for some processors.

He based his findings on a list of companies, which he said was delivered to him in a plain brown envelope.

He singled out Oakland Fisheries Ltd. and Swiftshare as companies fronting for Japanese investors.

Japanese investment helped save Oakland Industries Ltd. after it went into receivership in 1977 when it ran into financial difficulties through a price war between the large companies and soaring construction costs at its Montreal Street plant.

Now out of receivership, the company still has Japanese money invested in it. President Ned Easton could not be reached today for comment.

NDP Leader Dave Barrett told a news conference that $20 million to $40 million has been invested in processing by Japanese companies during the last year.

Lea said a fishing inquiry would provide an NDP government with information helpful to setting up a B.C. fisheries department.

He said Japanese companies have ownership in 12 of 60 processing plants, including two of the three largest — Canfisco, and B.C. Packers.

LEA
. . . inept licencing

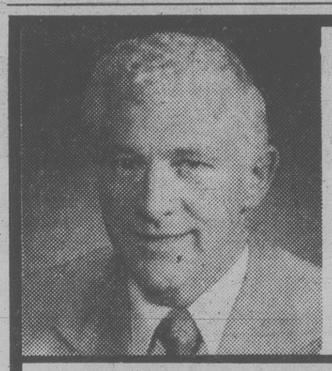

Barrett, who earlier in the day visited the B.C. Packers plant near here, stressed that not all companies with Japanese investment are exporting jobs.

He said that at B.C. Packers six steps in processing are done, including grading.

However, Brian Fitzgerald, a B.C. Packers employee said that during recent herring roe processing, 400 jobs were missing because there were fewer herring to handle. He attributed this to smaller herring runs and cash buying at the boats.

There are about 600 persons working at B.C. Packers now, he said, but no night shift has been put on.

Barrett Makes Hay At McGeer Mention

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — NDP Leader Dave Barrett said Tuesday that Education Minister Pat McGeer is the only person he knows who prints his campaign literature before a nominating meeting.

McGeer is seeking one of two seats in the Vancouver-Point Grey riding and his nominating meeting will be held tonight in Vancouver.

A boisterous crowd of more than 500 booed when Barrett referred to McGeer, who is the minister responsible for the Insurance Corp. of B.C.

Barrett reiterated an NDP promise to eliminate age, regional and sexual discrimination in automobile insurance.

The NDP leader said he was pleased with the public's response during his six-day campaign swing through the Okanagan, southern Interior and west-central B.C.

He said the Social Credit party is a scared coalition campaigning on fear and hostility, and took a number of humorous swipes at the government.

While Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm (when he was human resources minister) said the unemployed should be given shovels, the only jobs Socreds would be given where shovels could be used "are behind barns where they've been peddling you know what."

Barret also said Vander Zalm "spends most of his time singing little ditties."

And, in referring to the the premier's statement Monday that the previous NDP government had abandoned plans to build a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, Barrett said: "Ever since they've been elected (the Socreds), we've had more natural gas on that island."

The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. free-share giveaway also came under criticism. Barrett said it amounts to selling back to the people that which they already own.

"On a business basis, those people couldn't run a peanut stand."

He promised the crowd that the NDP would include in the B.C. Medical Plan a provision for financial assistance to persons travelling to the Vancouver-area for medical treatment.

Barrett was challenged on his statement that he would continue funding for independent schools while the NDP has stated its opposition to the funding begun by Social Credit.

Barrett said that while he is philosophically opposed to funding such schools, people had made plans to educate their children in that matter after the Social Credit government made the decision.

Hospital Charges 'Hogwash'

Barrett said in Terrace Monday, that the Social Credit government is playing politics with health care.

Wolfe, opening a $650,000 computer x-ray unit at Vancouver General Hospital on Tuesday, said hospital financing has not been cut.

Voters Voters Everywhere But Not a Hand to Greet!

By CHARLES LaVERTU
Canadian Press

Premier Bill Bennett found out Tuesday what it's like trying to find a hand to shake.

When the premier, his wife Audrey and Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis arrived at the third of four shopping centres they visited in Saanich to do some mainstreeting for the May 10 B.C. election, there was no one to greet them — not even a party hack.

Rather than go away empty-handed, the Bennetts made the best of the visit and went shopping for an egg beater and the ingredients of what the premier says is his favorite dinner — cheese souffle.

The visit was cut short for a coffee break at local Socail Credit headquarters where the premier met campaign workers before proceeding to the last stop of the day.

Curtis said the shopping centre stops were merely to fill in time on the way back to Victoria.

Earlier, the Bennetts and Curtis spent nine hours flitting about the islands in the Strait of Georgia between the B.C. mainland and Vancouver Island.

During the helicopter tour of Curtis's Saanich and the Islands constituency, they visited Saturna, North Pender, Mayne, Galiano and Salt Spring islands.

Bennett said he was not surprised at the outcome of the Prince Edward Island election Monday which saw the defeat of the country's last Liberal provincial government.

He said the ouster of the Liberals "indicates something — but I'm not too sure what."

On Mayne Island, Bennett was greeted by Jamie Brown and Paul Finkleman, who sang, to the tune of Michael Row the Boat Ashore, that: "On May 10, Bennett will not be here anymore, hallelujah, the NDP will be minding the store."

Bennett said he enjoyed the music, but did not find the lyrics very catchy.

Neither Bennett nor Curtis made any major speeches during the 20- to 40-minute stops, but asked their audiences to ask questions. They then answered with stock statements of party policy.

Local problems centred around lack of service from the B.C. Ferry Corp. Bennett said he will ask the board of directors to hold town hall meetings in the islands.

On Salt Spring Island, Bennett faced the only audience which could be considered hostile, one composed mainly of students at the school where he spoke.

Again the ferry service came under attack when one student suggested Bennett was using helicopters because the service is slow and inefficient.

The premier replied that the party supplied him with a helicopter so that he could cover more territory in as little time as possible.

He said if he were to use the B.C. Ferry system, the government would be subsidizing his campaign because the government provides an annual subsidy of $50 million to the corporation.

Stephens Hits Budget

OLIVER (CP) — Conservative leader Vic Stephens says the Social Credit party never intended to put its budget into effect and will not get a chance to implement it.

Stephens said the budget, presented by the government April 2, the day before the May 10 provincial election was called, was nothing more than a kickoff to the campaign.

"You could call it a dead-duck budget — hatched on a Monday and shot on a Tuesday."

A priority of the Conservatives is to remove the four-per-cent sales tax, Stephens said Monday at a meeting sponsored by the Boundary-Similkameen PC Association.

"Removal of the tax will stimulate the economy in that it will put another $400 yearly into the hands of the average family. Although there are some outside influences, government spending is a major contributor to unemployment and inflation.

"We are also opposed to any government giveaways. One of the NDP promises is to turn over $50 million to small business, but small business doesn't ask where this money is coming from. In fact, it is collected from small business and given back after the bureaucracy has taken its share.

"If taxes were reduced, then small business wouldn't need any handouts.

Tories Pick Lynn To Run in Victoria

Veteran radio and TV broadcaster Margaret (Maggi) Lynn has been nominated by the Conservatives to run in the two-seat Victoria riding in the May 10 provincial election.

She has worked for radio stations in the U.S. and has appeared on a freelance basis in Channel 10 community programs here.

Her nomination means the Tories will have candidates in all four Victoria-area ridings, although Lynn likely will be the only Tory hopeful in Victoria.

(The Liberals have already announced they will not be contesting any of the four local ridings.)

Deadline for nominations is Thursday noon.

Victoria Conservative riding president Patricia Parker said the Tories were determined to run at least one candidate in Victoria because the Conservative vote, while small, is growing.

"We must provide a free-enterprise alternative for those who want to make a protest vote."

In 1975, Tory Lloyd Burdon got 2,558 votes and running mate Peter Stanley got 2,179. Socred Sam Bawlf topped the poll with 15,143 and NDP candidate Charles Barber was also elected with 14,645.

In 1972, the two Tories did better: Edith Gunning got 7,843 votes while Clyde Savage received 6,218.

Nominations to date for Victoria are: Bawlf and Mike Young for Social Credit, Barber and Gordon Hanson for NDP and Lynn for the Tories.

Christians To Hear Politicos

Leaders from B.C. political parties will be guest panelists Thursday night at a church-sponsored public forum at the 2,500-seat PNE Garden Auditorium.

The only one missing will be NDP leader Dave Barrett who is scheduled to address a public meeting in Cranbrook.

Rev. H. D. Neufeld, spokesman for the sponsoring Greater Vancouver Christian Churches Association, said the Christian community "should express itself" during a provincial election campaign.

Neufeld said people would be asked for a $1 donation at the door to cover rental expenses and any profit would be turned over to the Canadian Bible Society.

Premier Bill Bennett, Vic Stephens of the Conservatives, Liberal leader Jev Tothill and Maurice Rush of the Communist party will attend, along with candidates from various Vancouver-area ridings in the May 10 provincial election.

And the 30-year-old millwright has even been accused of being an anarchist and a fascist.

"Words people don't understand, they stick on you," he says, not really bothered by it. "Yet the same people accept like sheep that politics and the courts will always go against them and that they can do nothing to change things."

Myron Zarry has been trying to change things. Because he and his wife, Janice, are strongly opposed to the federal government's commitment to nuclear technology and fear for the future safety of their children, Leon, 6, and Rachel, 4, Myron has refused to file an income tax return for the last three years. That landed him in Ladysmith provincial court where a few days ago he was found guilty and fined $600.

Though most of his taxes are deducted from his paycheque, Zarry feels that by signing the tax return form he is consenting to the way the government uses the tax money. And he does not consent.

"I'm not objecting to paying taxes," he explains. "I don't mind the money going towards other things, prolife things. But some things offend me so deeply I don't want to pay for them."

What Zarry wanted was a contract with the government to exclude him from paying to subsidize the nuclear industry. He talked to several Revenue Canada officials on the phone but they wouldn't really listen to his reasoning.

And so the well-read and articulate millwright went to court armed with data from all over North America on the hazards of low-level radiation. But he wasn't allowed to give any of what he considered evidence. He was told by the judge it was irrelevant to the charges.

"So where do you make your protest?" he asks. "Not signing a piece of paper didn't seem to be such an anti-social crime to me."

Next year, Myron says, he'll probably sign the form but will send an accompanying letter pointing out that it is not to be construed as approval of anything done on his behalf.

He took this line, he says, because of the way Canada has been selling reactors to military dictatorships and pushing ahead with nuclear power plants. He also took it because Canadians don't seem to be disagreeing with this enough.

"The Harrisburg thing, the China Syndrome — it's funny how things have broken loose at this time," Zarry says. "No, not funny. It's all very frightening."

"Well, thyroid disfunction is mental retardation," she adds angrily.

"I don't care if I have to live by candlelight," Myron says, "just as long as we don't have people who mine the uranium suffering from radiation poisoning and the rest of us living in danger."

The average person has to get more involved, Zarry believes. People put a cross on a ballot sheet and spend their working days paying for it.

"The democratic system can be enlarged; the involvement can be enlarged," he says. "The very reason people came to this country was to get away from oppression and have more freedom. They wanted to get to the New World. Well, there's no New World left, so we can't run anywhere. We must now try to change things here.

"People say jobs and the growing economy are the most important things but they're not. If you're not alive, who the hell cares?

"We're not perfect. Though I work hard with my hands, there are times when I simply screw up. Yet we are led to believe through the political system there are perfect people who never make mistakes.

"The government's responsibility to uphold the law has been stretched to the limit as far as pushing nuclear technology down our throats. No insurance company will cover this house against radiation."

Myron Zarry pauses, reflects for a moment, and then points out that if you drive a vehicle carelessly and you might hurt someone, you can be charged. You don't have to do it.

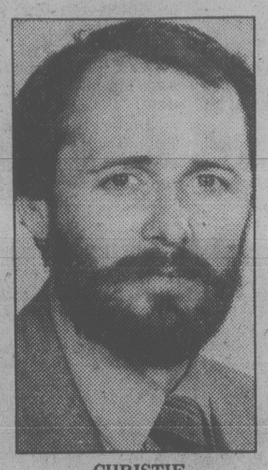

"Yet to turn things around the other way and to think that the government is risking our lives and reducing the possibility of our children ever having a life, it makes me as mad as hell."

Despite his courtroom setback, Myron feels there's hope of an end to the whole thing.

"Many people have come to me and felt comforted by the fact that I was able to say no," he explains. "There is hope that others will follow and that one day people will realize they don't have to put up with everything that is thrust upon them."

What about the ones who call him names? Myron Zarry grins.

"People I work with say I'm crazy to try ... but somewhere they like it."

Who'll Win The West This Time?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Western community voters may well decide who wins Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding May 10.

The 1975 provincial election was a cliff-hanger with Socred Lyle Kahl grabbing victory from the NDP's Frank Mitchell by a scant 121 votes.

Though relocation of the riding's boundaries means Mitchell has to work that much harder this time, it appears the race will again be tight with Kahl and Mitchell easily the front-runners.

The whole of Victoria West, from the Johnson Street bridge to Dominion Road, an area which traditionally has voted strongly NDP, has now been switched to the Victoria riding.

The Marigold and Strawberry Vale areas from Burnside Road to the old Interurban right-of-way have also been carved off and are now part of Saanich-The Islands.

Mitchell, a veteran Esquimalt police sergeant who was Esquimalt's NDP MLA from 1951-1952, says the loss of Vic West will be a bonanza for Gordon Hanson, running-mate for NDP Charles Barber in Victoria.

Mitchell says his campaign started back in 1975.

And with more than 600 workers and hundreds of orange and black lawn signs, the indications are Mitchell is running strongly in both Esquimalt and Metchosin.

The number of loggers in the Sooke and Port Renfrew areas, all members of the International Woodworkers of America, could produce a hefty NDP vote in that part of the riding.

If there is a weak area for thr NDP in the riding, it probably lies in Colwood, Langford and View Royal where there is a dearth of Mitchell election signs, compared with Esquimalt and Metchosin.

Although the riding has shrunk in size, the number of eligible voters has increased from 33,785 to close to 35,000 this year.

It is these voters, mostly located in rapidly-growing Colwood, Langford and View Royal, who could decide who sits in the house after May 10.

The other candidates in the riding are Conservative Bill Langlois and independents Doug Christie (Western Independence Party), Don Stansall who spearheaded the citizen-based Taxpayers on the March in 1978 and Wayne Williams, a ship oiler whose says he'll stay honest if elected and work for the little guy.

While Langlois and the three independents will all get a share of the vote, nobody believes, except perhaps themselves and their campaign workers, their efforts will be enough.

Neither Mitchell nor Kahl can be credited with running colorful campaigns. They rely on records, rather then rhetoric.

In spite of the growing number of new homes, many of them with a family boat or camper on the plot, the pundits repeatedly say the riding is essentially working class territory.

But does this mean there is no disenchantment with the NDP?

Take as an example the shopkeeper in the Hatley Park Shopping Centre who says she doesn't bring in expensive products to sell, relying on those more suited to leaner pocketbooks.

She hasn't made her mind up yet on which way she'll vote but adds, "If the NDP goes in again they will have learned their lesson. They won't be such a giveaway government."

One of her employees lives on Munro Street in Esquimalt, dubbed "Mitchell Land" because of the preponderance of Mitchell signs. Her vote isn't certain either.

She says she knows the rest of her family will vote NDP, but last time she voted Tory because of former Conservative leader Scott Wallace. This time might be different.

The provincial government's decision to create the Urban Transport Authority and levy regional districts with the cost of public transit has won the NDP the vote of an elderly man in Langford.

He's not happy at the prospect of having to pay an extra three cents a gallon for gas with the threat of bigger Hydro bills and higher property taxes for a transit system he never uses.

Doug Christie, who is convinced an independent B.C. is the best thing that could happen to this province, is sure of at least one vote in View Royal.

A storeowner there agrees with Christie that Ottawa's trade policies are overly-obsessed with the protection of manufacturing and industry in Ontario and Quebec.

A woman in View Royal lauded Kahl for his involvement in community affairs but feels he is being too low-profile in two current View Royal issues — the proposed transfer of oil tank farms from the Inner Harbor to that area and the building of a facility for dumping sewage near the new Helmcken Road Hospital.

Kahl, who says he's standing on his record, believes his efforts in helping to get such things as an overpass on the Trans Canada Highway are paying off.

He claims his community involvement is gaining him support even from non-Socreds.

He says this campaign is a more rational one than in 1975 with less emotion and funds easier to raise.

He says his top priorities are individual ownership, individual involvement, individual rights and individual opportunity.

Langlois, on the other hand, says the riding is being eyed as a dumping area by both the Socreds and NDP, the former going along with oil tank farms in View Royal — or at least not voicing any objections — and Victoria NDP candidate Charles Barber suggesting a light industrial park be created at Work Point.

Langlois has been knocking on doors since December and says the riding's biggest problem is unemployment, estimating it is at least 16 per cent.

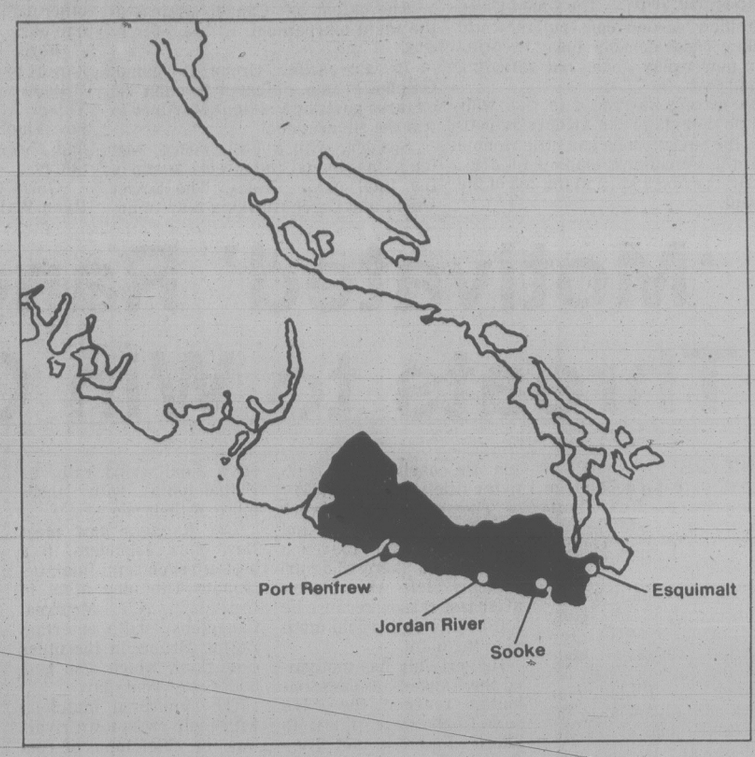

He sees neither Kahl nor Mitchell being able to work with any great effect as backbenchers in whatever party comes to power on May 10.

Mitchell, on the other hand, says it is up to MLAs to get up and fight for their areas and he disagrees with Barber on his Work Point suggestion.

Mitchell says if he gets back into the legislature, he wants the province to create its own fishing ministry, claiming B.C. is the only salt-water province without one.

Mitchell also wants forest management improved so that local mills are guaranteed adequate supplies of logs.

He says Sooke Forest Products must import hemlock logs from Port Angeles. Secondary industry should be created to make better use of chips and byproducts.

GVLRA Destroying Accord: CUPE

The Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association is intent on destroying any semblance of good labor-management relations, a Canadian Union of Public Employees spokesman has charged.

Jim Walker, spokesman for a Joint Negotiating Committee (JNC) representing five CUPE locals, laid the charge this week in a letter to Victoria area councils and the Greater Victoria school board.

He says in the letter the GVLRA "appears to be intent on obstructing an honorable settlement rather than working towards a peaceful one which would be fair and just to all concerned."

The strongly-worded letter is the latest move in a contract dispute involving more than 1,800 municipal employees in Esquimalt, Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney as well as school board workers.

Last week the GVLRA, which bargains for the employers, rejected a union request for a conciliation board to settle the outstanding issues which centre around wages.

The JNC is seeking a 17-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement while the employers' "final offer" is for a 7.25-per-cent hike in a one-year contract.

Walker said the union is appealling directly to the employers because the workers feel their case has not been properly heard.

Also, he said, it would be better to go the conciliation board route now rather than wait until after a lengthy strike or lockout.

Such action is in the cards, he said, but the employees don't want to be forced into a position of having to walk off the job, particularly during exam time in the schools or during the busy tourist season.

In his letter, Walker says the GVLRA's actions to date are "undemocratic, indecent and inexcusably damaging to the justifiable needs of the employees and the relationship of the parties."

He says for the past two years the employees have settled for less than the cost of living and it is not fair, reasonable or decent to force them to do so for another two years.

Figures in the letter show that the CUPE workers settled for six per cent in 1977 when the cost of living went up 9.2 per cent. They settled for four per cent in 1978 when the cost of living went up 8.2 per cent. That resulted in a wage increase in those two years which was 7.4 per cent less than the cost of living, Walker says.

The projected cost-of-living increase for 1979 and 1980 is 10.8 per cent and if the workers settled for the 7.25 per cent rate that the employers' are offering they would fall another 3.55 per cent behind in each of the years.

That would put the employees 14.5 per cent behind the cost of living over the four years, the letter says.

"We believe you inherited an elected responsibility when you assumed office which included assurance that employees in your jurisdiction would receive fair treatment.

"Your employees do not accept as fair treatment the sight of their incomes falling 14.5 per cent below the cost of living."

Boater Rescued

The Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre alerted the diving unit after a woman phoned to say she could see a small white boat on its side with a man clinging to it.

The man, who refused to give his name, was a non-swimmer. He was wearing a lifejacket and had been in the water 15 to 20 minutes.

Crane Frees Sea Lion From Graving Dock

Dock superintendent David Holmes said the sea lion probably swam into the dock about 12:20 a.m. when the water was raised to allow the container ship Sealand Exchange to enter the dock.

When the water was lowered the sea lion was discovered and Esquimalt police were called in to help.

They contacted the SPCA, which said it wasn't in the sea lion business. Sealand of the Pacific was then called and head trainer Cees Schragge, along with Wayne Wagner, general manager of Oak Bay Marina, arrived with a cage.

Eventually he was caged and lifted by the dock crane to the side of the dock.

He took one look at the water and jumped 30 feet down into the harbor and freedom.

"He looked at the water and that was it," Schrage said.

Fish Farm Proposal Tabled

A Saanich resident's proposal to create an eight-acre lake north of Prospect Lake for fish-farming and a wide range of recreational uses was tabled by Saanich council's planning committee Tuesday night until reports are received from senior government agencies.

Edward Travers, 205 Meadowbrook Road, wants to purchase 37 acres of municipal land adjoining his own 23-acre property and develop the area as a recreational centre.

His proposal includes an expansion of his present trout-rearing facilities as well as construction of a caretaker's house.

The lake would be created by flooding what is now a peat bog, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said in a report which recommended approval in principle of Travers' proposal.

Despite Travers' assurances that he had all necessary water licences, and had contacted officials in the fish and wildlife and water rights branches, aldermen decided to ask for a full environmental evaluation from such agencies.

Car Cutoff Opposed

Victoria council Thursday will debate a modified proposal to close the Government Street mall to vehicle traffic for three weeks this summer, but the proposal hasn't been scaled down enough to suit the Victoria Downtown Business Association.

President Philip Holmes Tuesday told a meeting of the Central Business Advisory Committee he was opposed to any closure of the mall.

The proposal is to block Government St. to car traffic from Humboldt to Fort during Victorian Day festivities May 18-28 and again July 16-30.

Earlier, there had been a proposal for a summer-long closure of the mall during business hours.

"I'm appalled council would even consider closure of such an important lifeline in the city's economy," Holmes said.

The proposal was put forward by Ald. Bill McElroy, city traffic committee chairman.

He said the mall could be a focal point for pedestrian activities such as street dances and fashion shows.

Merchants have expressed concern about litter, loitering and loss of business if the street becomes a meeting place.

Also at the Tuesday meeting, Holmes said the Victoria Downtown Business Assocation wants council to put a high priority on preserving railway rights-of-way for possible transportation corridors into the central business district.

Once the rights-of-way are sold, it would be virtually impossible to restore them, he said.

Pair of Boys Plucked From Hydro Tower

Two seven-year-old boys were rescued unharmed Tuesday night after they climbed to the top of a 80-foot B.C. Hydro main transmission tower near Helmcken Road and couldn't get down.

Hydro officials cut off the power in the 138,000-volt line to rescue Justin Dolfi of View Royal Avenue and Jamie Baker of Helmcken Road.

While the pair, Grade 1 students at View Royal elementary school, miraculously escaped unharmed, the incident has sparked grave concern among school and hydro officials and police.

View Royal principal Gerry Bell said today a Hydro safety program was run at the school only two weeks ago and students were told about the dangers of electricity.

Hydro spokesman Dorothy Tupper said it is a mystery how the boys managed to climb the tower as barbed-wire is wound around the base to a height of 10 feet.

Officials are now wondering if the barbed-wire is enough of a deterrent and what other measures can be taken.

The incident began shortly after 7 p.m. when a nearby resident spotted the youngsters climbing the tower.

Tupper said the father of one of the boys was contacted and went up after them and told them to remain where they were until help arrived.

Colwood RCMP were alerted at 7:14 p.m. and a Hydro crew, which happened to be in the area reached the scene minutes later.

Tupper said the boys had passed the lines and reached the top of the tower.

The power was cut at the Duncan station at 7:49 p.m. to allow RCMP Const. James O'Donnell and hydro crew members Howie Horner, Vic Favell and Bob Kent to rescue the pair.

...FOR FIFTH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Soviets Wrap Up Another World Title

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union won their second consecutive world hockey championship today, scoring four power-play goals and defeating Canada 9-2.

In raising its record to five wins and no defeats in the medal competition, the Soviet Union had little trouble with the Canadians, leading 4-0 after the first period and 7-2 at the end of the second.

In an earlier Group A game, Czechoslovakia defeated Sweden 6-3 on three goals by Vladimir Martinec to win the silver medal.

Sweden, with a 1-3-1 record, won the bronze medal and meets Canada in the final game Friday. The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia play in another game Friday to wind up the tournament.

Boris Mikhailov and Sergei Makaraov paced the Soviet Union against Canada with two-goal performances. Valeri Kharlamov, Alexander Golikov, Vladimir Petrov, Victor Zhluktov and Sergei Kapustin scored the others.

The Swedes led 3-2 after the first period but Czechoslovakia scored two unanswered goals in each of the second and third periods for the win.

Inge Hammarstrom, Rolf Edberg and Mats Naslund replied for Sweden.

In the consolation group, it appears Poland will finish last and be relegated to the Group B championship next season, to be replaced by the Netherlands.

Poland was whipped 5-1 by the United States on Tuesday, with Finland beating West Germany 7-3 in the other B Group contest.

The calibre of play and the intensity with which the consolation teams have performed throughout the tourney have some observors wondering how Canada might have fared against what is obviously less-talented opposition.

'Motivated' Rangers Threats to Win Cup?

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If Fred Shero is a good judge of character, New York Rangers may startle the hockey world and win the Stanley Cup.

Shero, who usually has little to say about his team, took time out to make a few remarks Tuesday night after the Rangers had eliminated Philadelphia Flyers and advanced to the semi-final round of the National Hockey League playoffs with an 8-3 victory.

"The New York Rangers remind me of the young Flyers teams that won the Cup," Shero said after the Rangers had captured the quarter-final series 4-1.

Shero should be able to make that sort of comparison. He coached the Flyers to the title in 1974 and 1975.

"They (the Rangers) work together, play together and will do anything for each other," said Shero who purportedly left the Flyers after last season because he felt he no longer could motivate the team.

He certainly has motivated the Rangers, a team that hadn't reached the NHL semi-finals since it lost to Shero's Flyers in 1974. They dropped the opening game to Philadelphia this year and then won four straight.

The key to the Rangers' triumph Tuesday night was a pair of goals and two assists from Walt Tkaczuk and superb goaltending by John Davidson. The Rangers built a 5-0 lead, then short-circuited a final-period rally by Philadelphia with three more of theirown,

The Rangers now meet New York Islanders in a best-of-seven semi-final, beginning Thursday night in Uniondale, N.Y. Montreal Canadiens will entertain Boston Bruins in the other semi-final, which also gets under way Thursday.

Rangers assistant coach Mike Nykoluk said of the Rangers-Islanders series: "I think we have an edge in that we have three lines that can score, while they depend on that one big line. Our defence is a little more mobile than theirs and can score a few more goals."

"I'm looking forward to practice tomorrow just to see who is healthy," he observed.

Captain Dave Maloney didn't play Tuesday night because of a pulled thigh muscle. Bobby Sheehan needed three stitches on the bridge of his nose, Don Murdoch suffered a mild concussion and Don Maloney had three stitches sewed in his bottom lip. Ron Greschner injured a shoulder.

Greschner started the scoring at 9:55 of the first period against the Flyers on a power play. Tkaczuk made it 2-0 with a shorthanded goal and, after a scoreless second period, nine goals were scored in the final 20 minutes.

Tkaczuk made it 3-0 and Steve Vickers and Ron Duguay increased it to 5-0 at 8:19. Then the frustrated Flyers erupted. Reggie Leach, Bob Dailey and Behn Wilson all scored in the next five minutes.

Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn took out his goalie with New York ahead 4-0, and Duguay scored a shorthanded goal into an empty net. That gave the Rangers five shorthanded goals in the series — a league playoff record.

After the score rose to 5-3, Carol Vadnais and Ed Johnstone whipped two quick goals past Flyers' goalie Wayne Stephenson and it was all over but Anders Hedberg's final shot into an open net.

Stingers Extinct

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Add Cincinnati Stingers to the list of World Hockey Association dinosaurs.

The Stingers played their final game Tuesday night, losing to New England Whalers 2-1 in the deciding match of their best-of-three quarter-final playoff series.

Cincinnati, which joined the WHA in 1975, has passed away — along with Birmingham Bulls — as the National Hockey League expands to include the other four WHA franchises for next season.

However, the Stingers went out fighting Tuesday and only a superlative effort by Whalers goaltender Al Smith — who stopped 33 of 34 shots, including several difficult ones in the last minute — enabled New England to post the victory.

"I can't fault our guys," said Stingers coach Floyd Smith. "We held them to two goals and that's a good effort."

The two teams traded power-play goals in the opening period with Jamie Hislop scoring first for Cincinnati. John McKenzie replied for the Whalers four minutes later.

"We had our chances and all the opportunities in the world," the Stingers coach added. "We got a little tired at the end. It was a very good hockey game."

Whalers now advance to semi-final action against Edmonton Oilers. New England managed just four wins in 14 games against the Oilers, who finished in first place, during the regular season.

The other semi-final resumes tonight in Quebec with the Nordiques holding a 1-0 lead in games on Winnipeg Jets.

Camp Opens Sunday For Budget Prospects

A total of 14 softball players are scheduled to arrive in Victoria over the next few days to attend a tryout camp for four positions on the Canadian men's team going to the Pan-American Games, scheduled for Puerto Rico in July.

Canadian-champion Victoria Budgets will supply 14 players for the Games squad and will operate the tryout camp next week at Royal Athletic Park.

Guenter, who pitched Saskatoon to several national titles, will be vying with five other hurlers — Wayne Bannman of Otterburne, Man., Cliff Bishop of Winnipeg, Bill Coveny of Ottawa, Claude Lefleur of Gatineau and Ed Unrau of Grimsby, Ont. — for places on the squad.

Stevenson is also looking for an infielder and a power hitter.

Others seeking berths are Larry Pavloff of Turtleford, Sask., Les Downing of Newmarket, Ont., Robert Putman of Brookfield, N.S., Clarke Christie of Ottawa, Robert Peterson of Hull and Mike Henderson of Brookfield.

Outfielder Mike Taaffe and infielder Warren Campbell, currently trying for places on the Budget squad, will also be in the running for positions on the Games team.

Players will be in attendance for Budgets' Northwest International League opener against Woodenville Lumber of Seattle at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic Park.

They will begin training Sunday and practice every morning at Royal Athletic starting at 10. The potential recruits will also compete in doubleheaders with Budgets on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

Two national team evaluators will also attend the camp to provide assistance but Stevenson will have the final say in determining the team makeup.

Torre, Altobelli Stage Act Over Bizarre Play at First

By Associated Press

Joe Torre of New York Mets and Joe Altobelli of the San Francisco Giants played their version of Who's On First? — only neither of them were laughing.

"It was like Abbott and Costello out there," quipped New York infielder Richie Hebner after watching the act at Shea Stadium during the Mets' 10-3 victory Tuesday night over the Giants.

The discussion between the two about a bizarre play at first base ended in what Torre called "a compromise — the Camp David accord." But there was still some confusion over the details after 28 minutes of animated talk.

"After you allow the man to second base, how do you call him out for not going back to first base?" Torre wondered aloud.

This was the situation: The Mets had runners at first and third when Lee Mazzilli hit a fly ball to right that Jack Clark appeared to catch. Hebner, halfway to second on the play, retreated to first — only to find Mazzilli waving at him to reverse directions. Now it appeared that Clark had dropped the ball.

Umpire Phil Lospitalier was still signalling 'out' when Clark relayed the ball to Bill Madlock, who stepped on first for what San Francisco thought was a double play. The Mets, however, had different ideas, claiming the dropped ball made both Hebner and Mazzilli safe.

Both teams howled and the umpires — working in place of regulars who are involved in a contract dispute — vacillated. Finally, they ruled Mazzilli out and ordered Hebner back to first. It hardly satisfied either Torre or Altobelli, each of whom filed a protest.

Things were a little calmer around the rest of the National League Tuesday night, as Pittsburgh Pirates routed Cincinnati Reds 9-2, Philadelphia Phillies outlasted Los Angeles Dodgers 7-6 in 10 innings, St. Louis Cardinals downed Atlanta Braves 6-5 and Montreal Expos whipped San Diego Padres, 5-1.

Meanwhile in the American League, Tommy John posted his 175th major league victory — 88 in the American League and 87 in the National — with a five-hitter as New York Yankees downed Oakland A's, 3-1.

In other AL games, Toronto Blue Jays blanked Texas Rangers on Dave Lemanczyk's one-hitter, Baltimore Orioles whipped California Angels 7-2, Kansas City Royals shut out Chicago White Sox 5-0, Cleveland Indians dumped Minnesota Twins 7-2 and Boston Red Sox shaded Seattle Mariners 4-3 in 12 innings.

Wheaties Grab Berth In Final

BRANDON (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings assured themselves of a berth in Western Hockey League's championship series with a 13-3 victory over Lethbridge Broncos Tuesday night.

Playing before a crowd of 3,313, the Wheat Kings improved their record to 2-1 in the inter-division round robin series. The Broncos, who lost for the fourth time in as many games, were eliminated.

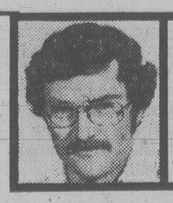

Wheat Kings and Portland Winter Hawks, who have won three games, complete the round robin series here tonight and open the best-of-seven final series here Thursday.

Wheat Kings set a WHL playoff record for the quickest two goals when Brad McCrimmon and Laurie Boschman scored within six seconds of each other early in the first period and tied another mark for most goals in a game.

BCWF Convention Delegates To Face Thorny Resolutions

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Delegates to the 23rd annual B.C. Wildlife Federation convention will have numerous contentious resolutions to vote on May 9-12 in Vernon.

And, traditionally, some of the resolutions passed at the annual convention eventually find their way into our fishing and hunting regulations.

One of the resolutions up for consideration parallels a suggestion made last year by this writer — for the Fish and Wildlife Branch to set up a toll-free number that anybody could use to report hunting and angling violations.

The provincial Forest Service is generally pleased with the Zenith 5555 number they set up to receive reports of forest fires.

A similar system, to help out the observe-record-report program set up by the federation and branch, would ensure quick and effective action by enforcement agencies.

Among the other resolutions up for consideration are requests to:

- Issue limited special hunting permits only by a draw system through branch headquarters in Victoria. This would eliminate a lot of confusion and inequities which have resulted from issuing the permits on a first-come-first-served basis at local offices.
- Control limited entry hunting on a regional basis with only supervision from the senior levels. A lack of communication between branch headquarters and the regional staff on this matter has resulted in several inexusable foul-ups for hunters.
- Extend the time limit and procedures for reporting big game kills. It isn't easy sometimes, given the geographical complexity of the province, to report a kill within the current time frame.
- Set up a mandatory bowhunting course and proficiency test to suppliment the Conservation and Outdoor Recreation Education program.
- Increase the fees for other Canadians and non-resident anglers.
- Raise the residency requirement for obtaining hunting and fishing licences from six months to one year and require more proof of residency.
- Pressure the provincial government to increase the branch budget. This is only logical in a province that boasts of its tourist potential.
- Boost fines and institute a mandatory one-year hunting suspension for anyone convicted of illegally killing big game.
- Institute fishing closures on lakes opened up to vehicular access by logging until the branch conducts inventory surveys to prevent overfishing.
- Protest advertising that depicts four-wheel-drive vehicles, motorcycles or snow machines used in an irresponsible manner.
- Change the Wildlife Act to offer more protection to wildlife being harrassed by dogs running at large.
- Impose a mountain goat harvest quota on guide-outfitters.
- Conduct a study on wolf and ungulate predator/prey relationships on Vancouver Island and mount an effective wolf management program to maintain a balance of big game populations acceptable to all segments of society.
- Support the Southern Moresby Wilderness Proposal as set out by the Islands Protection Society "providing the proposal include a nominal harvest of Peale's falcon young for the purpose of falconry, public display and breeding as long as present population levels are maintained."
- Back the provincial government's position that native Indians do not have the right to hunt and fish out of season.

TONIGHT

SOCCER — 7:15 p.m. — Island League, first division playoff final for Price Cup, Victoria West vs. Victoria Athletics, Royal Athletic Park.

'So You'd Rather Fight'

Rugged types on Vancouver Island apparently will soon have opportunities to turn their talents to punching.

Jim Chapman, one of the co-owners of Victoria Mussels, who will play their second baseball season in the Northwest League this summer, announced today that a program for those who have had no organized boxing experience has been scheduled for Memorial Arena on May 8.

Tentatively titled 'So You'd Rather Fight,' the one-night show will offer prizes of $1,000 to winners in each of three weight divisions — over 200 pounds, 176 to 200, and 175 and under — Chapman said.

Champman planned to release additional details later today.

It's 'Not a Dying Sport' But NBA Admits Trouble

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — "This is not a dying sport," commissioner Larry O'Brien says of the National Basketball Association. But he admitts that there is trouble in three key cities.

O'Brien told Associated Press sports editors from New England and New York that declining television ratings pose a problem for the league, especially because teams in New York, Chicago, and Boston — prime media centres — were weak in 1978-79.

O'Brien also speculated that the sport may be oversaturated on television because cable TV makes 200 to 250 games available to some viewers each season.

Nevertheless, O'Brien predicted "worldwide international competition" for the NBA five years after the next round of expansion in 1980-81, when two unspecified American cities will be added. He also reported that officials of New Orleans Jazz franchise were talking about moving the team to Salt Lake City.

O'Brien told the annual meeting of the regional sports editors that the NBA "needs winning teams in strategic Nielson (ratings) cities, New York, Chicago, and Boston." But he insisted the league will not take special steps to help improve those franchises, adding that a comeback by the Knicks, Bulls, and Celtics will come about because of sound local management.

O'Brien did say, however, that the future of Boston Celtics — once the NBA's dominant team — depends in part on improvements at Boston Garden or a move to a new facility.

"I am very concerned with the conditions at Boston Garden," he said. "It doesn't measure up as a sports arena."

The Celtics had to ask the league to move the site of the 1980 NBA all-star game because of obstructed views from many seats and the generally poor physical plant. Club owner Harry Mangurian was investigating building a basketball arena outside Boston with private capital, while the owners of Boston Garden — the corporation that owns Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League — were considering a multi-million dollar renovation of the 15-year-old facility.

"I don't understand what's going on up there," O'Brien said. "The arena (Boston Garden) is not up to par and something has got to be done."

Conceding that NBA television ratings have declined, he said, however, that the league is competitive, color-blind, and violence-free.

"The league," said O'Brien, completing his fourth season on the job, "is in its most stable financial condition in its 33-year history."

"WILL YOU KEEP YOUR ARMS DOWN!"

Benchmen Boost Hawks

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Terry Furlow and Tom McMillen, a pair of three-year men who spent most of the season on the bench, have rescued Atlanta Hawks from near-extinction and brought them back into contention against defending-champion Washington Bullets in their National Basketball Association quarter-final series.

Furlow, a mid-season acquisition from Cleveland Cavaliers, and McMillen, who has bounced around with several teams, came off the bench when starters Armond Hill and John Drew got into early foul trouble to combine for 40 points and lead the Hawks to a 107-103 victory over the Bullets.

It was the only NBA playoff game Tuesday night.

With Washington now holding only a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, the teams move back to Atlanta for Thursday night's sixth game. The Hawks boast a 35-9 home record this season, including a 17-game victory streak, but where they have lost twice to the Bullets in this series.

The two Western Conference semi-finals resume tonight with Phoenix Suns — holding a 2-1 advantage — playing the Kings in Kansas City, while Seattle SuperSonics can wrap up their series at home against Los Angeles Lakers. They currently hold a 3-1 edge. The other Eastern semi-final resumes Thursday night in San Antonio with the Spurs holding a 3-1 lead over Philadelphia '76ers.

"This is the most courageous win in my three years as the Hawks' coach," said Hubie Brown, citing injuries to starters Eddie Johnson, Drew and reserve Tree Rollins and the early foul trouble to Hill and Drew.

"There are not enough adjectives to describe the game played by Furlow and McMillen. McMillen kept us in the game in the first half when we were struggling."

McMillen got 12 of his 19 points in the first half while Furlow came through with 16 of his team-high 21 points in the second, including two free throws with eight seconds left that iced the game.

Baseball Club Owners Loved That Feudalism

By ROGER KAHN

NEW YORK — During the summer of 1976, when Americans celebrated the Bicentennial of Jefferson's Declaration, the barons of baseball still ran a feudal state. Far from the tall ships, I spent the summer wandering baseball fields from Oregon to San Juan. On one particular July night a prominent major league executive offered me an extraordinary document. The papers were marked "confidential," but the executive, filling my glass with ball-club liquor, said I was free to cull anything I wanted. His terms? They seemed modest enough. I had only to promise not to identify him by name.

At first I could barely believe my fortune. The document glittered, a kind of journalistic gold. It listed the salary for every player in the major leagues — Johnny Bench and Pete Rose, Reggie Jackson and Thurman Munson, and Fritz Peterson and Bob Bailey too, for that matter. These were not the guesses in which we trafficked during the feudal days. They were precise figures, collated from every front office in baseball.

I responded as the executive had known I would. I printed the most interesting numbers in a magazine and a book. This was, I told myself, a hell of a story.

Time passes, and one can think. I really did not have one hell of a story in 1976. Rather it was one hell of a half a story.

Where was the other side? What profits were ball clubs making? What revenues were they secreting on the advice and counsel of tax lawyers? Were was the other list, baseball's ultimate dark secret? In short, what were baseball financiers paying themselves?

I know when someone will leak that information to a reporter. It will be the same day that the Dodgers return to Brooklyn.

These thoughts and memories were stirred by the recent Florida spring, unique in my memory for incessant — and calculated — prattle about money. "How are you doing?" I asked the man who runs one club. My wording was inexact. I meant "hello."

"Good under the old system," he said at one. "That was when you could get away with drawing 1.6 million. Not good under the new system, because now I have to sell 2.2 million tickets to break even. I can't do it."

Another owner asked what I thought Pete Rose was worth.

"What he can get."

I would argue that," the owner said. "But have you considered the cost of mediocrity? I mean, if Rose gets $809,000 to hit .300, can't you see what that implies? We're going to have to pay all the .150 hitters half of that. We'll go broke paying bums $400,000."

* * *

They're Confused by Marvin Miller

As Joseph Goebbels pointed out in another context, if you hear something often enough you begin to belive what you have heard. Or at least part of what you have heard. Had I spent one more week beside the Gulf of Mexico I would have mailed Bowie Kuhn a certified check so that, for a few days at least, the Kuhns could eat as well as the Kahns.

In the reality of New York City, one's head clears. Far from financial crisis, baseball is an explosive growth industry. The feudal owners do not know how to negotiate with Marvin Miller, a contemporary man and a solid trade unionist. They loved their feudalism, and Miller confuses them by the margin of centuries. If the men who run baseball, rather than Henry Kissinger, had negotiated peace in Southeast Asia, San Francisco would now be the capital of Vietnam.

But one should not take the owners lightly, for what each of them understands is money. You can buy a ball club without knowing a slider from a curveball, but you cannot buy a ball club without money. The second thing owners understand is how to manipulate news. The free lunch, the press-room roast beef and most of all the well-considered leaks are their manipulative tools. They work these tools so well that it is impossible to have group baseball talk these days without someone crying out in passionate ignorance, "Aren't the ridiculous ballplayer salaries destroying the game?"

They are not. They have not. They will not. Nor are they ridiculous.

All but three major league teams are privately held companies. There is no such thing as public disclosure of finances for the Yankees, the Dodgers, the Reds, even the Houston Astros. The three clubs that are public — the Braves, the Cubs and the Orioles — make disclosures that seem incomplete.

You are only as good a reporter as your reasoning and your sources allow, but I have garnered certain baseball numbers. According to figures printed in daily box scores, last season's major league attendance was 40.8 million. Add the no-shows (at commissioner Kuhn's calculated roughly 6 percent of all tickets sold): 2.6 million people paid for tickets that they did not use. The average ticket price is $4. The gross gate comes to $173.6 million.

In March of 1978 Kuhn told the House Ways and Means Committee that the net revenue from peanuts and Cracker Jack came to 80 cents a fan. Add to this television revenues, plus income from the playoffs and the World Series, and baseball shows an over-all gross of $278.7 million for last season. That is a record. It is also a record that will fall before next winter.

* * *

You Can't Play Without Players

Last year baseball players' salaries consumed an aggregate of $68.5 million. That is less than a quarter of baseball's revenue. Does one need to point out — yes, one needs to point out — that you couldn't play the games without the players?

This season, baseball owners will be renegotiating a network television contract, and later the players' union will be renegotiating its basic contract with the owners. Misreading the psychology of ballplayers, the owners will try to reinstitute aspects of feudalism. Right now it is 30-to-1 that the ballplayers will have to strike next year. That means there will be no spring training. It also means that the owners, while mishandling negotiations, will manipulate news with great precision.

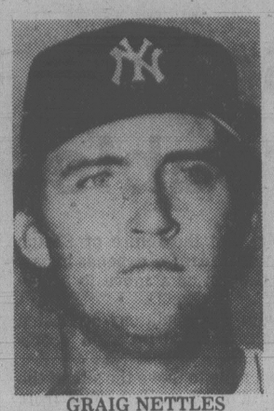

Do not mail commissioner Kuhn food stamps. He is a a fine and growing commissioner. He will be able to make his way through weeks of strike.

What will be more difficult is resisting the flow of managed news. If you find yourself saying, "Is Reggie Jackson overpaid?" then ask yourself the same question about George Steinbrenner.

My own answer is not complex: Neither is. They both take what they can get out of part of the entertainment businss in the most free economic system on earth.

I hope we do not become further distracted from the beauty of the game. A slider begins like a fastball and then slips a few inches down and away. A curve is slower, breaks more and defies all the laws we used to learn of physics.

GRAIG NETTLES

Graig Has Earned Respect ...But Not From Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Thanks to the magic of television and the fielding clinic he put on that turned the 1978 World Series around, sports fans know just how good a third baseman Graig Nettles really is.

Nettles just wishes someone would convince New York Yankees, the American Leage baseball club that employs him.

"They made some kind of tests a long time ago and determined I had the type of body that would break down at 32," says Nettles, who will be 35 in August. "They told me that once it goes, it goes fast."

But Nettles shows no signs of slowing down. Since the Yankees stole him from Cleveland in a lopsided trade in November, 1972, Nettles has hit 165 homers and driven in 554 runs while winning the Gold Glove as the American League's best fielding third baseman the last two years.

But the man who was named the all-time Yankees third baseman in a 1977 poll may be wearing a different uniform come 1980.

"They keep bringing up the age factor," says Nettles, who is eligible for free agency after the season and feels he is not only unappreciated, but also underpaid. "They go by all the factors except a guy's performance.

"I'd like to stay in New York, but I'd like to be paid like they appreciate me. I think I know my worth, and the ball club can obviously afford it.

"Boston did it for Carl Yastrzemski and Philadelphia did it for Pete Rose. They looked at performance, not age."

Yastrzemski is 39, Rose 38. And neither one has been a World Series hero lately.

"I've gotten a lot more respect from people for my defence," says Nettles, who was awarded the 1978 Gold Glove before Sunday's game against Texas and promptly displayed another facet of his game by rapping out three singles and a home run. "A lot of people thought of me as an offensive player and didn't think I could play third base until they saw it in the World Series."

Traditionally a slow starter, Nettles is batting .321 with four home runs and 13 runs-batted-in for the first 15 games.

Bosox Average $152,148

BOSTON (AP) — Salaries for Boston Red Sox players range from $21,000 to $700,000 a year, averaging out to $152,148 and totalling more than $4 million for 27 men, the Boston Herald American reported Tuesday.

The newspaper listed the salaries of all 27 without revealing its source for the figures. Baseball players usually do not disclose their salaries.

The average Red Sox salary is the third highest in major league baseball, topped by New York Yankees at $188,880 a year, and Philadelphia Phillies at $159,039, The Herald American said.

Five Red Sox players have contracts worth more than $1 million each for the life of the contracts, and pitcher Dennis Eckersley will join that group next season.

Top man is slugging outfielder-designated hitter Jim Rice, getting $700,000 in the first year of a seven-year contract worth $4,900,000, the newspaper said.

First baseman George Scott's salary was reported as $200,000, closely followed by catcher Carlton Fisk at $195,000.

Liverpool Boosts Lead

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool stretched its lead atop the English League First Division soccer race to seven points Tuesday by battling to a 1-1 tie at Southampton.

Nick Holmes salvaged a point for Southampton with a brilliantly headed goal after 74 minutes. David Johnson had put Liverpool ahead after 12 minutes.

West Bromwich Albion squandered a chance to close the gap on Liverpool by drawing 1-1 with Birmingham City, which will be relegated to the Second Division next year.

But the result was enough to lift Albion into second place ahead of Nottingham Forest, which plays in West Germany today in an European Cup semi-final match against Cologne.

THE SPACE OF THINGS TO COME.

The 1980 Chevy Citation.

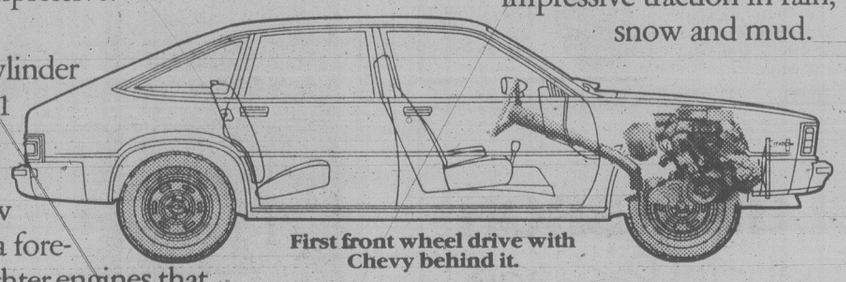

Take a spin in a new dimension. The first Chevy of the 80's proves that economy of size doesn't have to hamper your sense of style or space. Simply because it gives you a lot more passenger space without an increase in exterior size. By combining all the best features of European design and small car technology such as front wheel drive, transverse mounted engine, rack and pinion steering and MacPherson Strut suspension, the Chevy Citation brings a whole new dimension to driving.

Transverse Mounted Engine. Now here's where we really give you the goods. By mounting the engine sideways, the amount of space saved can be re-distributed for you. The resulting legroom allows you to stretch out and relax in both front and back seats. Giving a comfortable seating capacity for five adults. Behind the hatchback rear seat, the cargo room is just a fraction less than the trunk space of our big Chevrolet Caprice sedan. Now that's impressive.

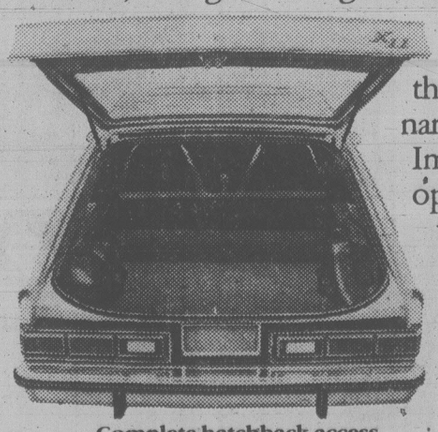

First Chevy with mid-size room and small car economy.

Front Wheel Drive puts the horse before the cart where it should be. The heart of the Chevy Citation is its front wheel drive. With 64% of the weight of the car over the drive wheels, power pulls rather than pushes. In other words the horse is before the cart where it belongs. Resulting in both directional stability and impressive traction in rain, snow and mud.

Overdrive in high gear. The base engine is a 2.5 litre 4-cylinder with a standard 4-speed manual transmission. 4th gear is a .81:1 overdrive. But equally as important, the 2.5 litre will give you a rate of acceleration and performance we think you'll appreciate. If you're looking for more power, consider the new 2.8 litre, 60 degree V6 engine. This new engine could well be a forerunner in terms of smaller, lighter engines that still deliver the power you demand. By arranging the cylinders at a 60 degree angle, the engine is narrowed considerably. Saving both space and weight. Important factors in our 1980 design ideas. An optional 3-speed automatic transmission is available with both engines. But either way, you've got more than adequate power, you've got spunk.

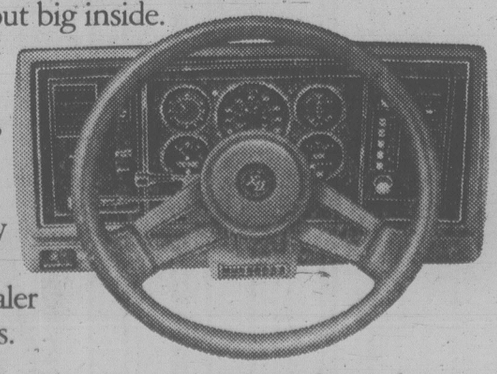

Complete hatchback access and capacity.

Fuel Consumption. A 22% improvement. Based on Transport Canada approved test methods, the Chevy Citation with a standard 4-cylinder engine and optional automatic transmission shows an average estimated combined city/highway fuel consumption improvement of 22% over the similarly equipped 6-cylinder Nova it replaces. This improvement is a product of aerodynamic design, less weight and a smaller engine.

The Chevy Citation could be just the car you've had in mind.

You've got to drive it to believe it. With the exterior dimensions of a small car and the interior dimensions of a mid-size (based on U.S. Environmental Protection Agency interior volume classification index) the new 1980 Chevy Citation is indeed a car of considerable contrasts. Compact outside but big inside. Versatile but sporty. Quick but also very smooth. And with a full line-up to choose from: the Chevy Citation 4-door Hatchback, the 2-door Hatchback, the 2-door Club Coupe (notchback) and the sporty X11, you'll be hard pressed not to find one exactly right for your individual style. But don't take our word for it. Visit your Chevrolet dealer soon and test drive the first Chevy of the 80's. You've got to drive it to believe it.

Big Mistake ...Big Payoff

TORONTO (CP) — What could have been a $60 mistake turned into a $42,721 windfall at Greenwood race track Tuesday.

That's the amount a Toronto horse owner and a mutuel clerk collected after a record $7,767.60 triactor payoff.

Adrian Roks, also a musician, and mutuel clerk Lou Alexander were partners on an $11 triactor ticket on the combination of Moving Mickey, who won the race at odds of 59-1, runner-up Pardestin and third-place finisher Croatia Cop.

Roks approached the mutuel windows as the field for the eighth race was being loaded ito the gate. He asked for a $1 triactor box on two, seven and eight.

Alexander, in a rush to get the ticket out, pushed the dollar amount twice. So, instead of a $1 three-horse box costing $6, the ticket came out worth $66.

Alexander could have been forced to keep the ticket and, had it been a loser, come up with the money. Instead, Roks suggested to Alexander that they split the cost of the triactor.

Both men collected cheques for $20,000 each, and took the balance in cash.

"My son looked at the form and decided he liked Moving Mickey," Roks said. "The other two horses figured. I spent another $33 on other combinations, too, though."

Moving Mickey, co-owned and trained by Frank Merrill, won the seven-furlong race by two lengths and returned $121.60, $30.40 and $24.40. Pardestin paid $5.90 and $3.20 and Croatia Cup returned $8.

Christmas Came Early For the Mutuel Clerks As Betting Stayed Open

That kept the betting open, and it stayed open until after the race at the pacing track, the Cleveland Press said Tuesday.

As soon as they learned the winner of the race, the mutuel clerks began feeding bets to the machine, and one was reported to have won $2,000, the newspaper said.

The betting machines are supposed to be switched off in the judges' stand at the start of each race. The Ohio Racing Commission was reported to be investigating.

The fourth-race winner, Fly Brownie Fly, went off at 7-1 last Friday night, but the heavy betting after the victory was posted brought the odds down to 4-1.

The betting might have been even stronger but the Press said some clerks were cautious because of an interference protest raised by another driver which could have cost Fly Brownie Fly the victory.

One unnamed mutuel clerk was quoted as saying the machines failed to turn off once before but it was so foggy on the track that the track announcer got the wrong winner, ruining what should have been a sure thing.

One clerk said the clerks lose a lot of money betting and anyone who collected deserved it.

"The track was lucky they didn't get hit for a lot more," he said. "When you have a sure winner you have got to go a little crazy."

USAC Boss Quits

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The board chairman of the United States Auto Club, embroiled in a continuing battle between USAC and the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams, resigned Tuesday because of a "potential conflict of interest" involving his other business concerns.

Reynold MacDonald, appointed president of USAC in 1973 and chairman of its board of directors since 1976, said the dispute that has split championship racing into two bitter camps created "a personal problem" that forced his resignation.

MacDonald is also chairman and chief executive officer of Interlake, Inc., a Chicago-based company in metals and material handling which does business with many of the sponsors and suppliers of USAC events.

"In 1973, when I accepted the position with USAC, it was with full knowledge and support of Interlake's board of directors," MacDonald said in a prepared statement. "During the last six years, with all concerned co-operating to improve USAC racing events, this relationship has been very important and constructive."

But he said the controversy between USAC and CART "has resulted in an abnormal amount of time being required to try to solve the problems and has created a potential conflict of interest for myself and Interlake."

"I cannot allow that to happen," he said.

MacDonald said the USAC board has accepted his resignation and his recommendation that USAC president Dick King assume the board chairmanship.

Meanwhile, Joe Cloutier, president of Indianapolis Motor Speedway, said USAC's rejection of Indianapolis 500 entries by six CART teams may not have been "100 per cent right, but they had some justification in doing something."

"Really, some of the things they (CART) have done are not necessary. I'm not really sure what they want. There were means of getting what they want within the organization."

Cloutier said the dispute "hasn't done racing any good."

France Rejects Pressure; Won't Boycott Rugby Tour

PARIS (AP) — Rejecting pressure from the International Olympic Committee, French sports authorities decided Tuesday against boycotting a visit by South African rugby players.

The French national and Olympic sporting committee issued a statement denouncing "the increasingly aggressive interference of politics in sports."

The group accused the IOC of discriminating against France by demanding the boycott of South African rugby players while South African sports groups belong to other federations with which the IOC is involved.

The visit by the South Africans became a critical issue earlier this month when the IOC appeared to threaten to bar France from the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow if it played host to the rugby players.

Claude Collard, the French Olympic Committee president, said, however, he had been informed by the IOC that the threatening paragraph in its message to his committee was "in error."

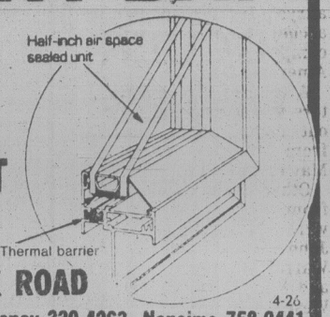

The French committee's criticism of the IOC did not completely end doubts about whether the rugby tour would take place.

The committee said it was up to the French government to decide, while French Sports Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson said the decision was up to the committee.

Warning that "the Olympic spirit is in danger of dying," the statement by the French group said that unless the sports world resisted political interference, it "is helping in its own destruction."

The statement insisted that competition with "certain sportsmen does not imply approval of their regime."

Barbarians Face Monumental Task

Oak Bay Barbarians will try to break a long victory chain Friday night while facing St. Michael's University School in the Howard Russell Cup playoff final of the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Game time is 4:30 p.m. at University of Victoria's McCoy Road field with the Hodgkins Division playoff final between Esquimalt and Lambrick Park serving as a prelude at 3.

St. Michael's have chalked up an impressive 25-0 record this season, beginning in the independent schools' league in September and winding up with 12 league victories and a semi-final win in the premier Russell Division.

But, regardless of the outcome, St. Michael's is leaving the league after the match.

Officials at St. Michael's, which has won three of the past four city championships, have decided that a seven-month rugby season is too long.

Further play with league teams will be on an exhibition basis only and St. Michael's won't travel to the provincial tournament in Burnaby next month.

St. Michael's had already qualified for the British Columbia tournament along with Barbarians and defending-champion Victoria Titans. Fourth-place Claremont Spartans will take over the third Island berth in the tourney, May 3-5.

"The length of the season really is demanding," said coach St. Michael's coach Mike Walsh.

"I have mixed feelings about the decision to drop out of the local league but I must admit it gets tougher all the time to keep the boys' interest high."

So from now on, St. Michael's will stick to the season starting in September against Brentwood College, Shawnigan Lake Boys School and St. George's of Vancouver.

City Archers Taking Aim

Vesa Myllyniemi and Gerri Cosgrove of Victoria have been invited to a tryout for the Canadian archery team which will compete in the Pan American Games.

A total of 25 competitors will attend the tryout camp, which runs from Saturday through May 6 in Ottawa.

Other archers invited from British Columbia were Marj Saunders, John Brooks and Don Warren of Maple Ridge and Phil Talbot of New Westminster.

Bristol City To Visit Caps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bristol City of the English first division will play an international game here May 26 against Vancouver Whitecaps, the North American Soccer League team announced Tuesday.

It will be part of a three-game North American tour for Bristol City, with other games against Seattle Sounders and Portland Timber. Dates for the Seattle and Portland games were not available.

It will be the Whitecaps only international game in 1979.

Repairs Hit a Snag At Ont. N-Reactor

DOUGLAS POINT, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Hydro has run into problems trying to repair a nuclear reactor at Bruce generating station A and spokesmen have given up trying to predict when it will be back in service.

Don White, Hydro community relations officer, said today it is taking longer than expected to remove a damaged fuel bundle jammed in one of the station's four reactors.

When the reactor was closed last Thursday, Hydro spokesmen said they expected a shutdown of three to five days.

A fuel bundle, an assembly of sheaths containing uranium dioxide, lodged in the end of a fitting inside the fuel channel during refuelling April 14. There are thousands of bundles, each 50 centimetres long and about 10 centimetres in diameter, in one reactor.

A Hydro official said earlier this week the problem poses no threat to public safety. The Bruce development is northwest of London on Lake Huron.

White said there would be an attempt today to pick up the bundle with a scoop device that was made especially for the job.

The coal being used to replace the nuclear power is costing the province $228,000 a day. And if the reactor remains shut until Friday, the total cost will be $1.69 million.

Earlier this month, between $700,800 and $800,000 damage was done to a tower in Bruce heavy water plant B when a valve was tested at the wrong time.

No Uniform for Medals

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Stenabaugh has more than 500 medals, including 20 Victoria Crosses, but no uniform to pin them to.

In addition to the world's largest private collection of Victoria Crosses, Stenabaugh owns medals dating from naval battles between the Spanish and Dutch in 1661 to recent upheavals over the British presence in Northern Ireland.

More than 1,349 Victoria Crosses have been awarded since the first was given in 1857.

"I started to collect medals seriously in the early '70s," said Stenabaugh, 53, a Huntsville, Ont., building supply retailer.

"However, I've always been interested in British military and naval history, getting into books and following up with medals. They are the closest and most personal relics that a soldier, a sailor or an airman can have."

Stenabaugh said his most treasured medals are those awarded to Field Marshal Sir Julian Byng, Canada's governor-general from 1921 to 1926, who commanded Canadian forces at the Battle of Vimy Ridge in April, 1917.

Although he would not reveal the price, a London dealer paid almost $40,000 last month for a set of medals that included a Victoria Cross awarded to a Canadian, Lieut. G. B. McKean, during the First World War.

Book's Gesture Slanders Jews

HAMILTON (CP) — The book Sign Language for Everyone has been removed from library shelves because of a complaint from a Jewish organization which said the book showed a symbol for Jew which was the same as the symbol for stingy, says chief librarian Frank Hogg.

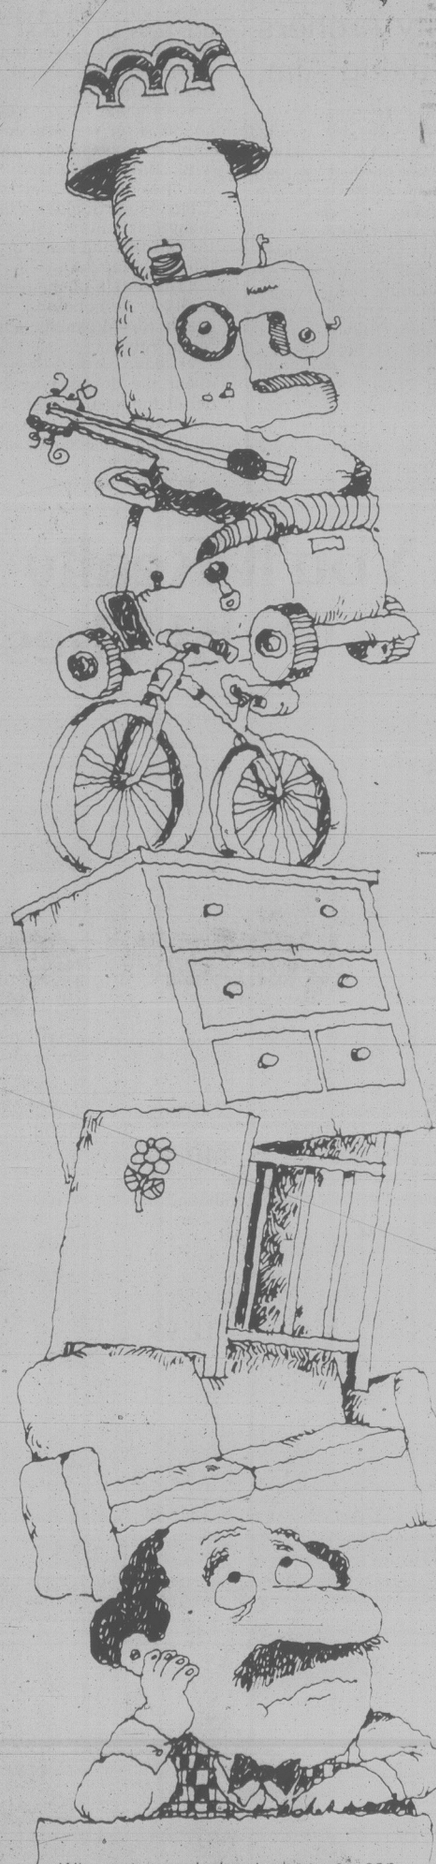

Hogg told a library board meeting on Monday that he checked the book after a complaint from the Hamilton Jewish Community Centre and found it was not using internationally-accepted sign language symbols.

"There's a difference between censorship and inaccuracy and we thought this book would be misleading," he said.

The book was not used by the Canadian Hearing Society, he said, and will be replaced on library shelves by a text the society recommends for teaching sign language.

Lawbreaking Aired? Never: McIlraith

OTTAWA (CP) — Former solicitor-general George McIlraith flatly denied Tuesday that he ever discussed the issue of RCMP lawbreaking with John Starnes, retired director-general of the RCMP security service.

McIlraith, now a senator, was testifying before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing. He was confronted by a memo Starnes says he wrote Nov. 26, 1970, two days after a "law and order committee" meeting he and McIlraith attended.

The three-paragraph memo began:

"On Nov. 24, 1970, George McIlraith, the solicitor-general, raised with me the question of what should be done to eliminate inherent contradiction in the existing security service which turns around the question of the commission of crime in the national interest."

"There was no such meeting with Mr. Starnes," McIlraith replied after commission counsel W. A. Kelly summarized the memo.

Kelly asked whether McIlraith had raised the issue of the "inherent contradiction," as lawbreaking by the RCMP was referred to in other documents going before officials and cabinet ministers late in 1970.

"He did not raise that with me nor did I raise it with him because I don't hold such views," McIlraith said.

"Are you saying the contents are totally false?" asked Kelly.

McIlraith said the specific reference to him as solicitor-general seemed odd in a personal memo.

When Kelly asked again whether McIlraith considered the memo, in Starnes's handwriting, to be false McIlraith replied: "Mr. Starnes is not a man to make a false document."

McIlraith was solicitor-general from July 6, 1968, to Dec. 22, 1970. Starnes was director-general of the security service from Jan. 1, 1970, until April, 1973.

Starnes, closely questioned about the memo during private hearings of the royal commission last winter, said that "this was just a conversation between George McIlraith and myself and it is just lucky I kept it. (the memo) I might have chucked it out."

"I (had) pointed out that this (lawbreaking) had been the subject of discussion for some time, especially the question of the protection, if any, which can be provided members of the security service or agents of the security service who may on occasion have to break the law. As the minister was aware, the theory being advanced in some quarters was that breaking the law might somehow be easier for a civilian service than for the RCMP. I mentioned to the minister that the RCMP had in fact been carrying out illegal activities for two decades and that this point had been made in various discussions.

"The minister had remarked that in his view, in the public mind, it would probably be more acceptable for the RCMP to commit crime in the national interest than for this to be done by some civilian body."

McIlraith denied having any such discussion with Starnes.

The senator also contended that the royal commission had misinterpreted the term "inherent contradiction," which throughout the documents was applied to RCMP lawbreaking.

He couldn't recall seeing any of the documents, he said. He noted that he had been blind in one eye in November, 1970, and could barely read as a result of cataracts. He said lawbreaking wasn't discussed at the Nov. 24 meeting to his recollection, although documents listed it as a prime topic.

Records show that McIlraith and Starnes attended the meeting.

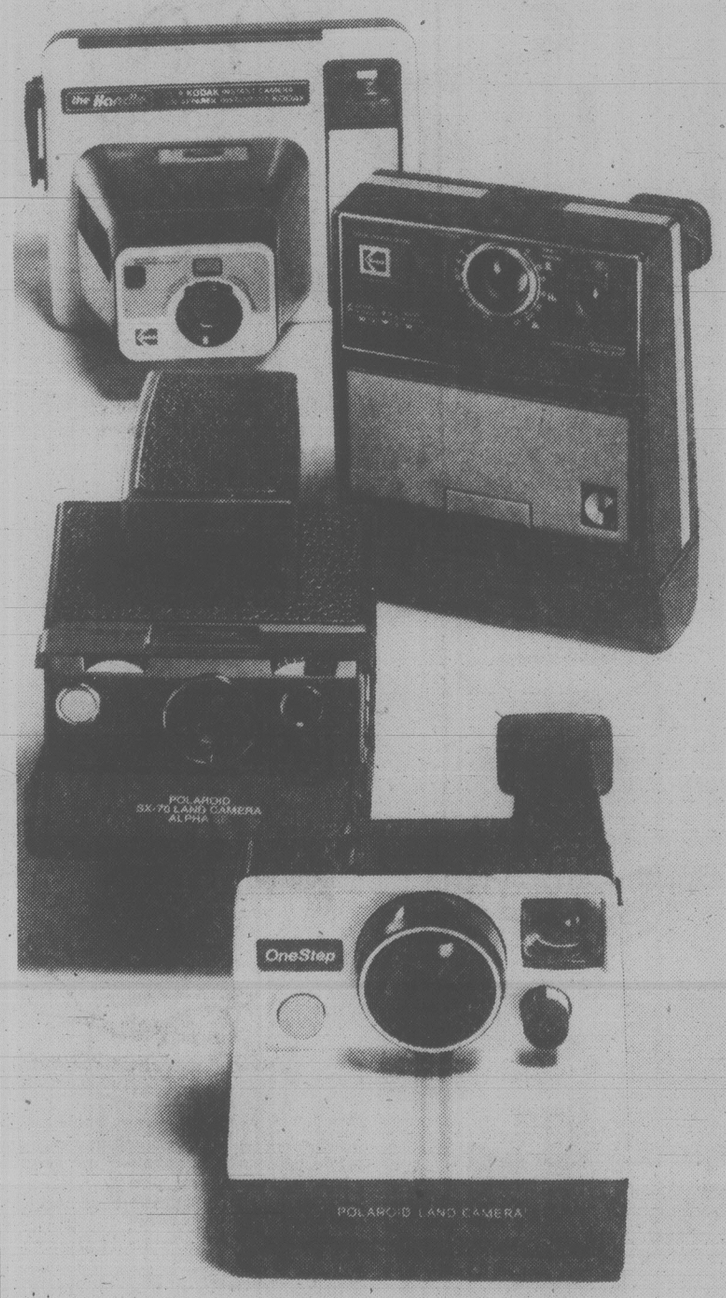

The 70-year-old McIlraith also testified that he didn't read "thoroughly" a 1968 royal commission report on security. He said his eyesight was bad then and got through the report as best he could.

He denied ever being told the RCMP opened first-class mail, broke into homes and offices, and committed other illegal acts in carrying out investigations.

Drivers Win Top Court Plea

OTTAWA (CP) — The Criminal Code says that any driver whose licence is suspended in any province and is caught driving is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for two years.

But two British Columbia drivers who were found driving while their licences were suspended were found not guilty of an offence by the Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday.

In a 4-to-3 decision, the court said the Crown must prove that drivers are aware that their licences are suspended before they can be found guilty of the Criminal Code offence.

Both Joseph Claude Baril of Clearwater and William James Prue of Kamloops were convicted of impaired charges under the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act. The Act calls for an automatic suspension of driving privileges for three months.

But in both cases the Crown could not show that the men were informed by the court, their lawyers or provincial officials that they could not drive for three months.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, who wrote the majority reasons, noted Crown arguments that ignorance of the suspension was ignorance of the law and not of fact and therefore was no defence.

If this were so, said the chief justice, the operation of the Criminal Code would vary in different provinces.

It would create an automatic offence in provinces whose motor vehicle acts provide for automatic suspensions of driving privileges but not for those provinces whose acts require written notices of suspensions.

"This cannot be," he wrote.

He also said that whether a person's licence is suspended is a question of fact and not of law.

The chief justice said it is essential for the Crown to prove that a driver has guilty knowledge — that he knows his permit is suspended and drives just the same.

Mr. Justice Roland Ritchie, writing the dissenting reasons, said drivers in provinces where suspension of licences is automatic after an offence are ignorant of the law if they insist on driving.

He said the Criminal Code proviso that ignorance of the law is no excuse applies to these persons.

Ritchie also said that there was no evidence that either Baril or Prue made any effort to find out if their licences had been suspended.

FIRST FEMALE RECRUITS to the ceremonial guard parade unit, a popular tourist attraction each summer on Parliament Hill, are these three Ottawa girls. 'Sacrament' Pot Plea a Failure

OTTAWA (CP) — John Allan West of Vancouver, who describes himself as a political and spiritual philosopher, also is not a hard loser.

After hitch-hiking here, he pleaded and lost his own case Tuesday before the Supreme Court of Canada. He was seeking a review of his conviction of growing marijuana.

West already has served his 90-day sentence for growing marijuana, which he calls his sacrament. He says he did it as an act of civil disobedience and to show his belief that drug laws in Canada inhibit freedom of religion, contrary to the Bill of Rights.

In his arguments to the Supreme Court, West tried to quote Prime Minister Trudeau. He was told that perhaps he should address his arguments to Parliament and not to the courts.

Dryers on Black List

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada has published a list of blow hair dryers it advises consumers not to use or buy.

The models on the association's list include seven General Electric dryers, the Porta-Pro PD400, Power Brush PB100A, Power Brush PB200A, Pro-650 PD700, Pro Turbo TD100, Pro Turbo Deluxe TD200 and Super Pro TD310; three Subbeam models, the Brush 'n Blow PHD-1, the Dial and Dry AD95 and Li'l Red Devid HD85; two GS Iona Products, the PD 1350 and Voyageur M1200; and the Topaz product, the 900 GM-801.

None of the Braun, Charlescraft, Clairol, Gilette, Philips, Ronson, Shick, Soloray or Kenmore models tested by the CAC were found to contain asbestos.

The association said in a news release it will urge that asbestos-lined hairdryers be removed from the market if government tests show they emit asbestos particles.

"One United States researcher has likened the health hazard associated with the use of asbestos-containing hair dryers to living near an asbestos mine," the CAC says in the release.

The group will press the government to consider a total ban on the use of asbestos in all consumer products.

Detailed results of the test are to be published in the August issue of The Canadian Consumer.

'Women Not Persons' Rule Recalled

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Justice Bora Laskin was treated to a slice of feminist history Tuesday with a reminder that the Supreme Court of Canada ruled 51 years ago that women were not persons.

In a brief ceremony in his private chambers, a delegation of women presented Laskin with a plaque commemorating a Privy Council decision in 1929 that overturned the Supreme Court, declaring that women are indeed persons.

The plaque is a replica of a medallion, cast in silver and in bronze that the National Action Committee on the Status of Women commissioned to mark the 50th anniversary of the person's case.

On April 24, 1928, the Supreme Court ruled that women were not persons under the British North America Act, the constitution.

Five Alberta women had asked the court to rule on the matter after being told that women could not be appointed to the Senate because there was uncertainty about the meaning of "persons" in the constitution.

The constitution said "qualified persons" could be summoned to the Senate.

The women appealed the case to the Privy Council in Britain and Oct. 18, 1929, won their battle.

The medallion depicts the five women: Henrietta Muir Edwards, Emily Murphy, Nellie McClung, Louise McKinney and Irene Parlby. It contains a bilingual inscription: "Women are persons."

The text of an accompanying scroll presented to Chief Justice Laskin adds that the first of the silver medallions minted will be saved for the day when a woman is appointed to the Supreme Court bench.

Lynn McDonald, president of the National Action Committee, said the memento was given to the Supreme Court, rather than the Privy Council because "this is where our rights will be defended. We're not a colony any more."

Two of nine women senators joined the ceremony — Liberals Florence Bird and Renaude Lapointe. A Senate spokesman said 18 women have been appointed to the Senate since the persons case.

Filled Flights In Wardair Ads

TORONTO (CP) — Wardair Canada Ltd. and its subsidiary, International Vacations Ltd., went on trial Tuesday, charged with false advertising and not providing enough seats to back advertising claims.

Federal officials said they believe it is the first time an airline has been charged in Canada with not providing a reasonable number of seats after advertising bargain fares.

Wardair and the subsidiary, which operates under the name Intervac, are also charged with making false and misleading claims about the availability of seats in the summer of 1977.

The charges are based on advertisements for flights to London which were placed in The Star and The Sun from April to July, 1977. The companies offered bargain flights and claimed: "Intervac slashes prices of Wardair flights. Save up to $60 per couple."

Passengers testified Tuesday that they tried to book flights after seeing some of the advertisements for advance booking charters and were told the flights were not available

Patrick and Carol Doyle of Toronto said they answered the June 25, 1977, advertisement which said seats were still available at a $60-a-couple saving.

They said they tried to book for late August and were told nothing was available before Sept. 23.

Marcel Chartrand of Belleville said he answered an April 23 Wardair advertisement on April 25 and was told, "they were all booked up" for early July. When the ad was repeated a week later, he immediately went to another travel agent and was told the same thing, he said.

Chartrand, an employee of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, which laid the charges, said he wrote "a private letter of complaint, to our department" about the case.

Federal investigator William Howe testified that he answered a May 7, 1977, ad for London flights on May 9 and was told there were no seats for July 6 flights. Howe said he later examined Wardair records and felt the flights were overbooked at the time the ads were published.

Edmonton's 'LRT' Pronounced Big Success

By MARK CAMERON

EDMONTON (CP) — Champagne corks are popping as Edmonton officials tout the city's latest push into mass transit as the best thing since provincial grants.

One year ago today, light rail transit whirred into life here, carrying its first passengers through one of two 1.5-kilometre-long underground tunnels, and into the sunlight for a 5.75-kilometre above-ground ride in the city's northeast section.

Any initial skepticism Edmontonians may have had about the $64.9-million system — known as the LRT — was quickly put to rest.

Eager to save time, energy and money, commuters and shoppers rode the rails at a rate of 18,000 a day compared with the anticipated 12,000.

"In all respects, our first year has been a success," says Don Miller, Edmonton Transit's general manager.

"Each day the LRT is carrying more people than was predicted. The line was operated without major shutdowns, our passengers ride safely and comfortably, and noise levels are low."

The big test was last summer when the LRT carried 69,000 Commonwealth Games visitors during a single day, Aug. 8.

"Imagine trying to transport that number of people in one day in private automobiles or even in buses," says Miller.

"We would have needed 84 buses operating on a continuous shuttle, or 8,625 automobiles making round trips with four people in each car."

David said there have been delegations from Munich, London, Hong Kong, Australia, as well as from cities across Canada and the U.S.

"Just about every city in North America is looking for improved forms of mass transit. They've been coming to Edmonton to see if the claims about LRT are true."

The line was built on Canadian National Railways rights-of-way in the city's northeast section, where transit ridership was found to be the heaviest. Clarke Stadium, Commonwealth Stadium, Northlands Park race track and Edmonton Coliseum are all located near the line.

Many cities have failed in attempts to revive the tram, often experimenting with new technology and complex operating systems.

But in Edmonton, engineers used the winning combination of proven technology and simplicity to rekindle hopes for light rail systems around the world, says David.

John Tofflemire, senior transit planning engineer, stresses that the LRT wasn't designed to replace cars and buses, but to round out the city's overall transportation picture. Cars and buses feed passengers into the system.

Design work has started on a $9-million, three-kilometre extension of the existing line, with construction completion expected by 1982.

A study is to be released this fall on the possibility of a line running south from the central station, across the North Saskatchewan River and past the University of Alberta. A $117-million provincial grant towards public transit capital expenditures will likely be used to finance the project.

Other routes extending straight west and north would give the city about 40 kilometres of track.

Water Shortage?

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The world's demand for water will more than double by the year 2000 but with careful conservation there will be enough to meet mankind's needs, Agriculture Secretary Francisco Rabaga told a world congress of water experts.

Alta. Museum Unveils Old Oil

CALGARY (CP) — A piece of Canadian history became public property this week when Lt.-Gov. Ralph Steinhauer unveiled a 150-year-old painting of his great-grandfather at Calgary's Glenbow Museum.

The portrait painted by American artist John Neagle in 1829 shows Henry Bird Steinhauer, then 19 years old. An Ojibwa, he later became a prominent pioneer Methodist missionary in northern Alberta.

The painting was discovered recently in a New York art gallery and acquired for $44,008 — with funding supplied by the federal government and the museum's new 401 Club.

Steinhauer was painted in Philadelphia while on a tour raising funds for Methodist missionary work. He received a free education because he agreed to adopt the name of a distraught German immigrant family whose only son had died.

Contempt Case Adjourned Two Weeks

SASKATOON (CP) — A contempt of court case against a Saskatoon cable television company and a community affairs program host was adjourned without plea for two weeks.

Program host B. C. Cranfield and Saskatoon Telecable Ltd. are charged with contempt of court relating to a program transmitted Feb. 21 which commented on performances by four Saskatoon provincial court judges.

Cardinal Assigned to Manage Band

ASSUMPTION, Alta. (CP) — The Slavey Indian band at this northern community has run into financial difficulties and officials have ordered an audit to determine the extent of the problem.

Harold Cardinal, former regional director of the federal Indian affairs department, has been asked to take over as the band's manager and has been working with the band for several weeks.

Olds Rec Centre To Rise from Ashes

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A new $3-million Olds recreation centre to replace the arena destroyed by fire last Nov. 1 will be completed by May 15, 1980, the project's construction manager says.

Sam Chez of Edmonton, of EPEC Consulting Western Ltd., said architectural and engineering drawings for the project are 30 per cent complete.

Moose Jaw's 'Gopher-Hole' Image Irks

MOOSE JAW (CP) — The Moose Jaw Historical Society wants to see some 60 historical buildings preserved in Moose Jaw and district.

Said society president Nancy Dunnin a brief to the municipal planning commission: "This may be our last chance to . . . prove we have a history. When the tourists do come to stay and stare, they will stare at beauty and our history, not a gopher hole."

Pay-Early Carrot

SASKATOON (CP) — The city of Saskatoon has increased parking fines by $10 for all violations but will give $10 discounts if the fines are paid within 72 hours.

The city has been finding that without any real teeth in a summons, 20 per cent of the fines went unpaid.

Trudeau Blind to Culture: NDP

ELECTION 79

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent paid a brief visit to this northern Quebec community Tuesday night and told a small gathering Prime Minister Trudeau does not understand French- and English-Canadian cultures.

Broadbent said the existence of two cultures living side by side makes Canada an exciting country. But Trudeau could not acept this as a sign of national strength.

However, the NDP leader stressed economic concern for most of a 30-minute speech delivered in French. He appealled to the crowd of less than 100 to consider the NDP as a change from the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives when ballots are cast for the May 22 election.

"The problem with Trudeau is that he does not accept nationalism," Broadbent said, adding that he is sympathetic to the desires of Quebecers to preserve their culture.

More people must realize that it is possible to be a Quebecois as well as a Canadian, he said. But he steered clear of any direct reference to the possibility of an independent Quebec economically linked to the rest of Canada.

The NDP message in Quebec is the same one delivered in the rest of the country — the need for strong economic leadership, said Broadbent, making only his second campaign appearance in the province where the party currently holds no seats. NDP officials admit privately that prospects for gains are slim.

Broadbent cancelled a second public meeting in the area scheduled for today to fly to Toronto to make what party spokesmen are calling a major policy announcement on housing.

The NDP, with support slipping in public opinion polls, is anxious to shore up strength in vote-rich southern Ontario in several closely-contested ridings.

Earlier, Broadbent told a St. John's, Nfld., news conference he is not interested on commenting on NDP support for the Liberals or the Conservatives in the event of a minority government.

He also said it was "typically arrogant" of Trudeau to suggest he would try to form a goverment even if the Conservatives elect more members than the Liberals.

Russian-Type Camps For Criminals Backed

OYEN, Alta. (CP) — Dangerous criminals should be banished to isolated work camps in the far North, says Arnold Malone, Conservative opponent to Trade Minister Jack Horner in Alberta's Crowfoot riding.

Malone said Tuesday the Russians have the right idea when it comes to dealing with criminals.

"We could use the northern areas, like Russia does, we could put more of those people up there at those northern lakes."

Malone represented the riding of Battle River until Parliament dissolved. He faces Horner after redistribution.

Malone's remarks came after a question relating to a recent murder in Edmonton in which two paroled prisoners have been charged.

Malone, however, later qualified his remarks.

He said he did not wish to send offenders to cold climates as punishment, but to lakes where they could be treated more humanely than in prison and where they could work in the fishing industry.

"You cannot rehabilitate people locked in cages," he said.

Horner, who appeared at the same all-candidates forum where Malone expressed his view on the penal system, said the Conservative was wrong.

No Socred Opposes Rondeau

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — The Social Credit party has decided not to run a candidate against Gilbert Rondeau, incumbent Independent candidate in Shefford riding, who is out of jail pending an appeal against his third criminal sentence in two years.

Robert Leroux, vice-president of the local Socred riding association, said Monday that party leader Fabien Roy has agreed with the association's decision not to contest the seat.

Rondeau left the Socreds in 1977 and sat as an independent after being found guilty of tax fraud related to political contributions.

Omissions Hit Party Coffers

TORONTO (CP) — As many as 50,000 qualified voters missed during enumerations in Metropolitan Toronto could mean the three major parties each have $12,500 less to spend during their campaigns, party officials say.

Each voter on the list represents 25 cents in allowable campaign expenses over and above the $20,000 allowed by law for the first 25,000 eligible voters in each riding.

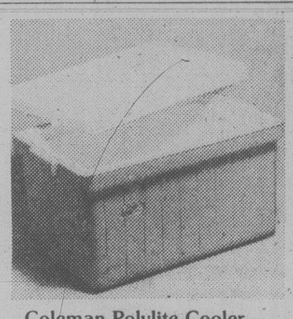

However, election laws say the amount candidates can spend is determined by the first list, no matter how many eligible voters are missed.

Elizabeth Budway, returning officer for the Spadina riding, estimated that 1,500 to 2,000 names will be added to the 35,282 names already on the list when court of revision closes May 4.

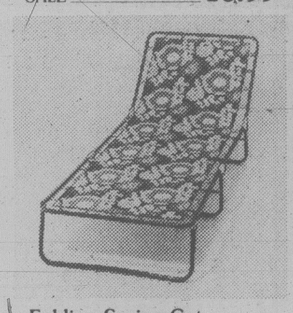

In the Eglinton-Lawrence riding, returning officer Flo Morson said enumerators missed three apartment buildings and that she has already had 435 calls. A Liberal campaign worker said as many as 1,500 voters may have been missed.

Networks Wary of Clark Offer

ELECTION 79

OTTAWA (CP) — A decision by Joe Clark to accept in principle the television networks' format for a election leaders debate was greeted with some caution Tuesday.

Mike Daigneault, CBC's television news and current affairs director, said in a telephone interview from Toronto he wouldn't comment until he sees what Clark's conditions are for taking part in the debate with Prime Minister Trudeau and New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent.

"At this point we don't know if his conditions are major ones or minor ones," Daigneault said. The political parties and network officials are to discuss the debate issue again Friday.

Robin Sears, NDP national campaign director, said his party is pleased with Clark's decision.

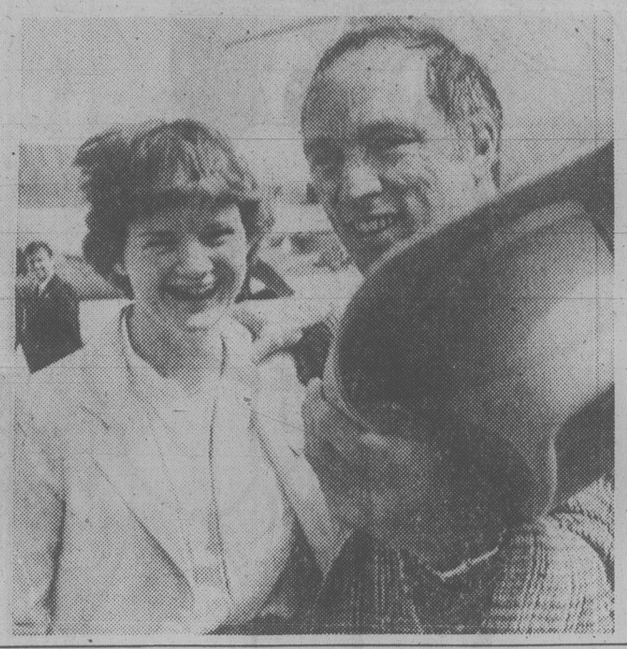

"We hope he doesn't change his mind before Friday," he said.

The NDP official said Clark and the Conservatives probably realized it was a "very serious mistake" to skirt a debate with the other two national party leaders.

Meanwhile, William Kashtan, Communist party leader, said in Montreal he should be included in the debate. A debate between the NDP, Conservatives and Liberals would deny Canadians the one party offering them a true alternative - the Communist party.

He said he will call on the networks and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) to ensure Communist participation in the debate. political parties."

HAT TRICK performed by Prime Minister Trudeau in Williams Lake Tuesday hid whatever might be transpiring between him and young lady who came to meet him during campaign stop there.

No Further Speculating, For Trudeau

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

KELOWNA — Prime Minister Trudeau says he "would have been wiser" if he hadn't stated this week he would try to form a minority government even if the Conservatives win a "few" more Commons seats than the Liberals.

Trudeau said his remarks to reporters aboard his campaign jet were "speculative in nature" and made in response to "hypothetical questions."

"I think I'll stop speculating about what happens if we have a minority government," he told a news conference at Williams Lake.

In attempting to play down the minority scenario he outlined on Monday night, Trudeau was reacting to criticism that such an attempt to hold power would go against the wishes of Canadian voters.

Trudeau had stated less than 24 hours earlier that he would attempt to form a government with the backing of the New Democratic Party if the Tories emerge from the May 22 election with a razor-thin plurality of Commons seats.

Trudeau, questioned about his remarks at the news conference, said "the constitution only demands one thing: That the party which governs has the support of Parliament."

In other words, the Liberals wouldn't have to hand over power unless they were defeated in a vote of confidence in Parliament after the election.

Trudeau said his minority government scenario "had more to do with my innermostfeelings" about what he would like to do than the actual "political" decision he might make after May 22.

"I'm fighting for a majority government," he added. "I hope we're going to get one."

Although the PM stepped up his attack on Clark as a big spender who would spur inflation, Trudeau added to his own list of campaign promises a bid for farmers' votes.

He told the news conference he would set up an Agriculture Export Corporation at an initial cost of $4.5 million "to promote and aggressively market abroad" farm products, ranging from vegetables and fruit to poultry and soya beans.

Trudeau said the new corporation would be similar to the Canadian Wheat Board, which sells grain to export customers.

Earlier in the day, the PM told a rally of about 300 supporters at Cranbrook that Conservative campaign spending promises are "a sure way to accelerate inflation."

Saying Clark didn't know the total cost of his promises, Trudeau asked rhetorically: "Would you buy a car from a person who said, "well, I'm not sure if I'll sell it at $2,000 to you, or $7,000. But I'll tell you sometime later."

It was Trudeau's best line in a day of lack-lustre campaign speeches that were greeted by polite but restrained applause from friendly audiences at the Cranbrook rally and another at Williams Lake.

Last night, the PM got a somewhat more enthusiastic response from 300 Liberals in this city, who paid $15 a plate to attend a dinner where he spoke.

Trudeau denied he has avoided talking about the economy during the election, and praised his government's economic record.

He said Canada had faired better economically in the past decade "than anyone except Japan."

Pressure By Horner Claimed By NDPer

SURREY (CP) — Federal Trade Minister Jack Horner is putting undue pressure on a Surrey company to relinquish its licence to develop a machine that processes sugar cane, says a federal New Democratic Party candidate.

Cyril Barkved said Tuesday that Horner has put pressure on the Hawker-Siddeley plant to turn over its research licence to an Ontario company with ties to the Liberal party.

Leonard Mitten, plant manager, said that since his company turned down a proposal by Windsor-based Arvid Machine and Tool Co. to share its licence, Horner has harrassed Hawker-Siddeley.

Mitten said that Horner first put pressure on the federal patents agency, Canadian Patents and Development Ltd., to review Hawker-Siddeley's licence.

The board unanaimously agreed to leave the licence, so Horner decided to restructure the board, Mitten said.

"There has been continuous harrassment ever since the licence came out," Mitten said.

Clark Admits Que. Woes

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — Joe Clark conceded Tuesday that his Progressive Conservative party is having "a little problem" getting support in Quebec for the May 22 federal election.

He told a meeting of about 300 that although he had predicted the party would win 60 of the 75 available seats in the province, there appeared some distance to go to reach this target.

"There is a little problem here in Quebec," Clark said, noting that the party appeared to have support of only 14 or 15 per cent of the voters.

It was an apparent reference to a CBC television poll released Monday which showed the party leading among decided voters in all regions except Quebec.

The poll showed the Conservatives with only about 15 per cent of the decided vote in Quebec compared with more than 60 per cent for the Liberals and about 15 per cent for Social Credit.

"I need Quebec," Clark said, adding that the only way to change the Liberal government was to support his party.

He said a Social Credit vote is a vote for Prime Minister Trudeau. Early in the day in Perth, N.B., he said an New Democratic vote is a vote for Trudeau.

PQ 'Backing Reds'

MONTREAL (CP) — Members of the Parti Quebecois are the second largest source of financial support for the Communist Party of Quebec, says a Communist candidate in the federal election May 22.

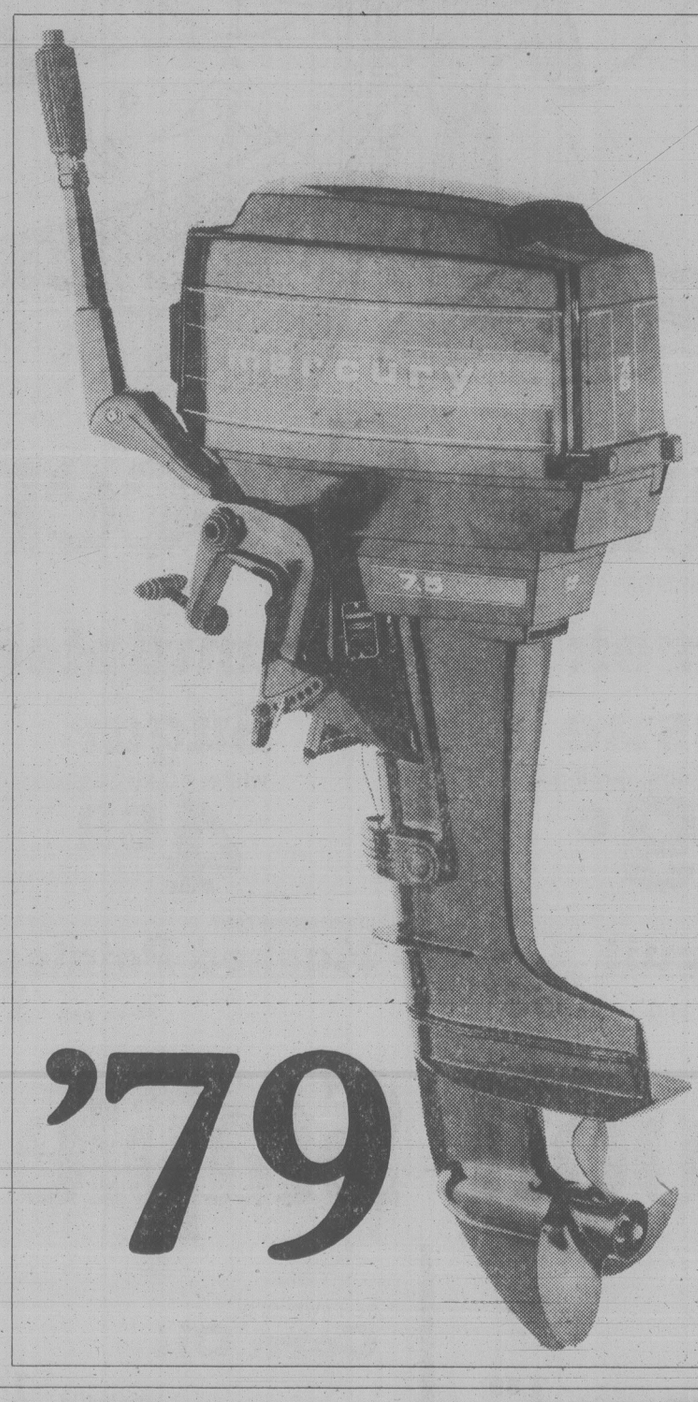

Sam Walsh, candidate in the Montreal riding of St. Michel, said the financial support, second only to the party's own sympathizers, is probably an act of protest to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's veiled endorsement of Fabien Roy and the Social Credit Party.

Walsh, speaking at a press conference Tuesday to launch the party's 19 candidates in Quebec, said PQ members in every constituency "are protesting by signing the nomination papers of our candidates.

"And now they're making financial contributions to our party," he said.

Crown's Case Nearly Ready

Jurors were excused for all but a few minutes of testimony Tuesday in the 14th day of the trial of five men accused of conspiring to import 13.63 tons of marijuana last year.

County court Judge Peter Millward was to rule today on whether matters discussed at a day-long voir dire will be admitted as evidence before the jury.

The Crown is close to completing its case against five men indicted for conspiracy to import a narcotic, for importing and for being in possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. Marijuana valued at $20 million was siezed July 15 near Tofino in a joint operation of police and naval forces.

The accused are John Mobley Doss, 25, of Dillon, Colo.; Garth Clarence Vincent Joseph Sexton, 28, of Vancouver; Ronald Cecil Spurrell, 31, of Surrey; Frederick Charles Scott, 28, of Vancouver, and Frank Piersanti, 28, an American.

Fourteen others, not indicted, are named as co-conspirators to import the narcotic.

The only evidence heard Tuesday by the jury related to the times and dates of 11 telephone conversations intercepted by police between June 11 and July 8, 1978.

Before The Judge

Judge Blake Allan called an Oak Bay woman a "scoff-law" before imposing a total of $360 in parking fines Tuesday in Victoria provincial court.

Judith Griffin, 931 Transit, pleaded guilty to 51 traffic violations and defence lawyer Richard Stewart attempted to explain the situation to Allan.

Stewart said the woman received the tickets, which totalled $300 in fines if paid within the specified period, but was not in a financial position to pay them.

He said Griffin was a potter with a studio on Vancouver Street at the time and received all the parking tickets around that area. He said she didn't have a kiln and needed her vehicle for transportation. But she lost track of time when she was working and went out to her car to plug the parking meter only to find a ticket had been placed on her windshield.

Allan, in calling Griffin a scoff-law, noted that there were 41 meter violations, nine loading zone violations, two violations for taking up two parking spaces and one ticket for leaving her key in the ignition with the motor running.

He levied $5 fines on each of the 41 overtime-parking tickets, $10 on each of the nine loading-zone violations, $15 each for the two tickets for taking up two parking spaces and $35 for leaving her keys in with the motor running.

However, he allowed her to pay the fines at the rate of $50 a month.

Two Victoria youths were charged with two counts of breaking and entering Thetis Lake Park facilities Monday.

Michael Reginald Banks, 17, and Daryn Brian Curson, 19, both of 723 Field, were charged with breaking into a life-guard hut and concession stand at the park.

Allan released both young men on their undertaking and remanded them until next Tuesday for election of their trial method.

An Esquimalt youth was given a suspended sentence and six months probation after pleading guilty to uttering a forged document.

Kenneth William Boseley, 19, of 639 Constance was given the term after informing Allan he had made restitution for $120, the amount of a money order he cashed at the Bank of Montreal, 1250 Esquimalt.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Boseley took the Bank of Nova Scotia money order made out to Gloria Winters, signed his own name under her endorsement, and cashed it Dec. 21.

Court was told the woman stated her signature was forged. Boseley said he found the cheque but the signature was already on the back.

He told the court he was unemployed at the time and needed the money because he was late with his rent and also needed groceries.

Allan ordered a 22-year-old Vancouver man to perform 35 hours of community service work after handing out a suspended sentence and six months probation.

James Clayton Zavitz pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk. Laughton said Zavitz was observed laying on the sidewalk in front of the Strathcona Hotel on April 9 at about 8:30 p.m., forcing pedestrians to walk around him. When Victoria city police arrived, Laughton continued, Zavitz became violent and had to be detained in police cells.

In addition, Allan ordered Zavitz to report to the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society in Vancouver for counselling.

Two Years in Pen

QUALICUM (CP) — Randall Stuart Reid, 28, was sentenced Tuesday to two years in penitentiary after pleading guilty to possession of a weapon for the purpose of committing an offence.

Court was told that early Feb. 20, Reid went into a cabin rented by his wife, who was living with her three children. He threatened her, telling her he was going to shoot and make her glasses and teeth shatter.

Dance Emphasis Changes Evident

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

As a prelude to the official opening of the Victoria Music Festival, Wednesday through Friday of last week was devoted to special dance performance and competition. Included was the section for schools and clubs, traditionally one of the festival's most colorful aspects.

The section has its own separate honor performance and this took place Tuesday at Central Junior Secondary. Dr. David Docherty of University of Victoria's physical education faculty, and national dance authority Hugh Thurston had adjudicated and for the program selected performances that were representative of the best work presented.

There has been an interesting change in emphasis in recent years. Although the section is subtitled "folk dance" this festival reveals far more jazz, social and creative dance than the formerly predominant ethnic forms.

Doherty was much impressed with the creative work done by many schools. He was also pleased that so many boys participated, pointing out the athletic nature of dance and its rewards in strong and well coordinated movement.

Schools and clubs represented on the honors program were Glanford, (two groups, kindergarten and Grades 4 to 7); Cordova Bay Grade 1; James Bay kindergarten; Rockheights Grade 3; Monterey Grade 7; Willows; Tillicum Grade 7; Uplands (two groups); Gordon Head (two groups); Torquay; Cedar Hill; Lansdowne (two groups) and Shoreline.

Clubs were the Zagreb Croation Dancers; Spanish Dancers and Latin American Association Dancers.

The Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria's senior award was presented to the Zagreb Croation Dancers and the junior award to the Spanish Dancers. Nancy Ferguson Awards were presented to Glanford and Gordon Head, and the Intercultural Association of Greater Victoria award went to the Latin American Association group.

Merit awards consisting of cheques to be used for the purchase of records to assist dance classes were made to Cordova Bay, Gordon Head, Cedar Hill, Uplands, Lansdowne and Shoreline.

Another traditional section of the festival — speech — has been making some waves of its own this week in the minds of those attending sessions at St.Matthias Church hall. Some strikingly talented individuals and groups have participated and drawn enthusiastic audience reaction and commentary from adjudicator Walter Kaasa.

An example in the Bible, open class, was the presentation by Martha Readings which Kaasa described as "a superb beautiful reading." Ms. Readings is a senior citizen and the adjudicator suggested that next year a new non-competitive class for senior citizens should be inserted in the syllabus. He suspects that there may be a wealth of talent waiting to be discovered .

In another Bible class for age under 21, Kaasa awarded a 90 to Hilary Freundlich and 87 to Kathy Olafson. A mark of 90 was also given to Christia Banman in the under 21 Favorite Poem.

St.Patrick's School, Grade 3A, in a speech choir class, also invoked superlatives, Kaasa describing the group as altogether exceptional.

Speech classes tonight include under 21 dramatic solo and a mime class in which the three top rated students will participate; public speaking, and a class for dramatic duologue. There are no piano sessions tonight. Vocal at St.Andrew's Kirk Hall will feature the female oratorio class.

Piano, vocal, speech and studio dance continue Thursday and piano accordian classes will begin in St.John's Church Hall on Balmoral. Thursday evening the speech art honors program will bring that section of the festival to a conclusion.

Good in spring or any other time are Maple-Orange Glazed Ham, Sunshine Ham, Ham Hawaiian

Hamming It Up a Spring Ritual

The delights of spring are many for the lovers of food. And one of the handsomest is glazed baked ham. For some it is known as the king of meats.

Today tender, tasty ham is available all year, so it is not only a meat for spring but for all seasons.

No one knows for sure when salt was first used to cure the leg of pork to turn it into ham but we do know this is one of the earliest forms of food preservation. Until well into the 19th century, curing and drying were the main methods of meat preservation all over the world.

Today ham can be purchased and smoked, fully cooked and ready to eat or smoked and uncooked or partially cooked. The latter requires additional cooking time at home. Smoked and cured ham is also sold canned.

As ham is available in so many forms it is important to read the label. It will indicate whether or not the ham has been completely precooked and it will give cooking directions.

Each packing house has its own cure with a characteristic flavor for each brand of ham it processes. You'll find there is a kind and brand to suit every need.

Maple-Orange Glazed Ham
(Makes 12 to 14 servings)

- 1 whole ham (10-12 lbs.), bone-in and fully cooked
- ½ cup maple syrup
- ½ cup orange juice
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- whole cloves

Place ham fat side up on a rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer into fleshiest part of ham so it does not touch bone or rest in fat. Bake in 325°F oven about three hours, allowing 15 to 17 minutes per pound until internal temperature on meat thermometer registers 130°F.

Thirty minutes before ham is done remove from oven. Score ham by cutting ¼-inch deep into fat, making cuts 1-inch apart lengthwise and crosswise, forming uniform diamond pattern.

Stud diamonds with whole cloves. Mix together maple syrup, orange juice, cornstarch and cinnamon. Spread on all sides of ham.

Raise oven heat to 375°F. Return ham to oven; bake 30 minutes longer, basting occasionally with remaining glaze. Remove to warm platter. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes to allow juices to set and make carving easier.

Note: Substitute corn syrup for maple syrup in recipe, if you wish.

SUNSHINE HAM
(Makes 4 to 6 servings)

- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 package (3-oz.) lemon or orange flavored jelly powder
- 1 tablespoon marmalade
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1 can (1½ lb.) cooked smoked pork shoulder or ham
- Lemon or cucumber slice
- Green onion or green pepper slivers
- Parsley

Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water. Stir in marmalade and prepared mustard until mixture is thoroughly blended. Open canned ham; remove gelatin from meat and add to jelly mixture. Strain and chill 5 to 10 minutes.

Wash and rinse ham can, (be cautious of rough edges). Pour a ¼-inch layer of jelly mixture on bottom of can. Chill to set.

Place lemon slice and pepper slivers on bottom to make a sunburst or flower design. Spoon about 2 tablespoons of jelly mixture onto design then place ham chunk back into can. Pour jelly mixture around ham to fill can.

Place in refrigerator and allow to chill for at least 4 hours. Pour remaining jelly mixture into 8x8-inch pan. Chill.

To serve: Unmold ham onto platter. Cut 8x8-inch sheet of jelly into cubes. Garnish ham mold with jelly cubes and parsley.

HAM HAWAIIAN
(Makes 4 servings)

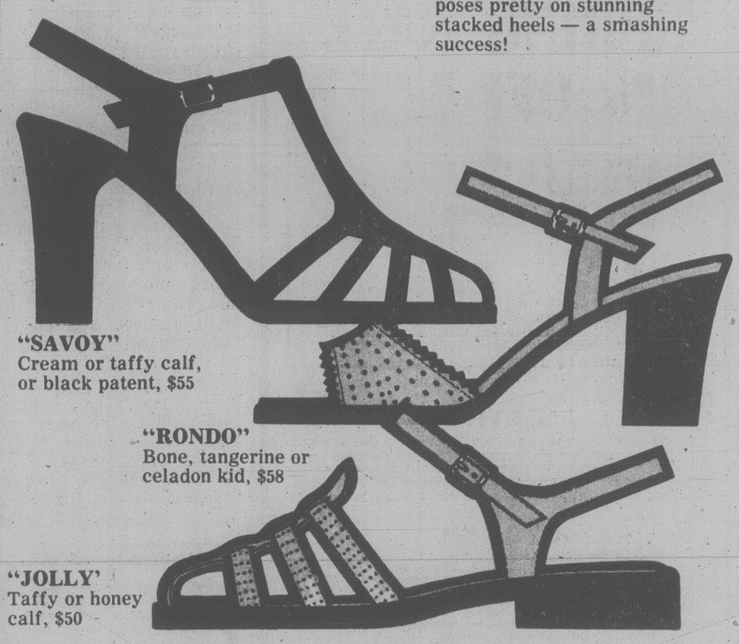

- ½ medium green pepper, chopped
- 2 stalks celery, finely sliced
- 1 pound cooked ham (leftover), cut into cubes
- 1½ teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1 can (14-oz.) pineapple chunks in their own juice
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon cider vinegar
- 2 cups cooked rice

Use non-stick pan if possible. Or lightly oil frying pan. Add green pepper, celery slices and ham cubes. Saute 5 minutes. Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Mix syrup, prepared mustard and cider vinegar. Stir into ham mixture. Cook, stirring, 2 to 3 minutes. Add pineapple and heat through. Serve over fluffy rice.

Baking Bread Makes Sense

As bread is still called the Staff of Life, it seems only natural that more Canadians are becoming interested in making their own.

Searching for the real reason I find two. First is the increasing price of light, puffy loaves that do not satisfy the appetite; and, linked with that, is the impossibility of reducing one's overweight when eating this type of bread.

Breads of mixed grains are available commercially and some make very good eating, with one thickish slice enough for a lunch with plentiful salad or homemade soup. But the price puts these really good breads out of reach for constant use by a family on a low income.

Making a couple of loaves each week should not be impossible for most homemakers, especially with the kneading left out and the one raising period taking place in the oven at the beginning of baking.

For the first trial run of bread making, one needs to concentrate on ingredients, amounts and oven timing and temperatures. After becoming familiar with the routine, two loaves can be made from beginning to end in 60 minutes.

Because there are so many beginners who want to make bread but feel uncertain about thir ability, let me remind you that none of us was born knowing how to make bread and comparatively few grew up in homes where bread making was a part of life.

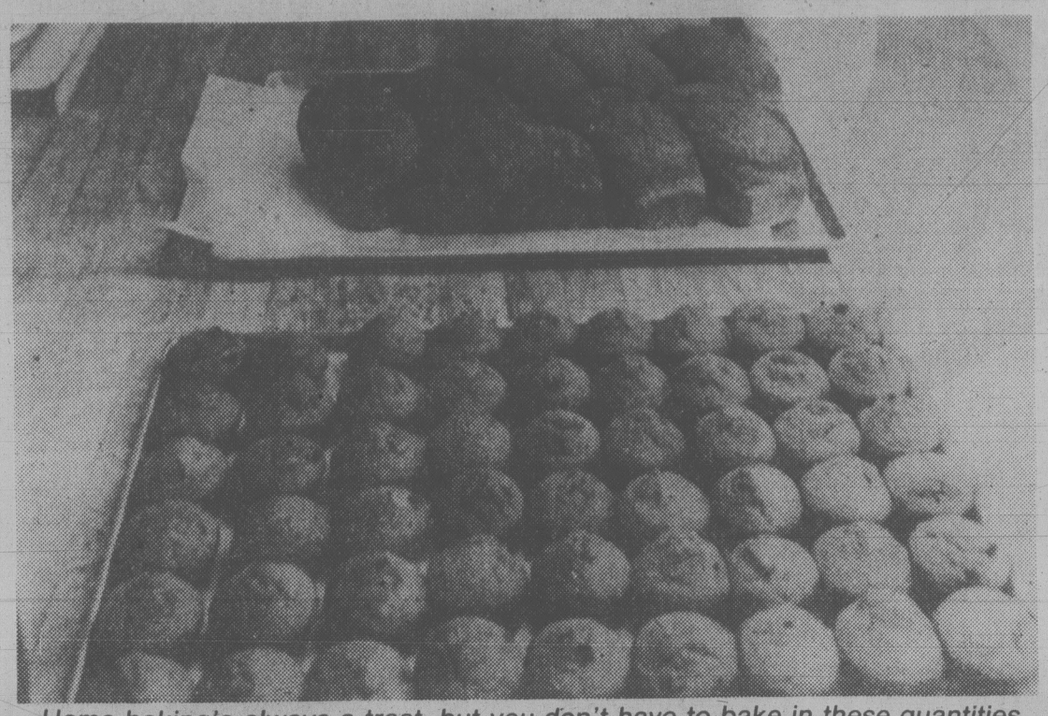

I remember my own first effort. It must have been in 1947 for the recipe before me bears that date.

A friend visiting from Vancouver, telling me she made bread each week for her mother's special diet.

Although a business girl at the time, my friend said she made the necessary amount of bread in one evening. This encouraged me, for at the tine I was fully occupied for often more than 14 hours daily.

Here is my first recipe, for White Bread.

And I hope you will like it as much as we did when I ran a batch as a renewal test for this column.

Home baking's always a treat, but you don't have to bake in these quantities

WHITE BREAD

¼ cup warm water
1 tsp sugar
1 tbsp yeast (1 pkt)
¾ cup hot water
1 tbsp soft margarine
1 tsp salt
2¾ cups unbleached flour
¼ cup wheat germ

In large warm mixing bowl, measure warm water and sugar. Sprinkle yeast over surface and let stand 10 minutes until bubbly.

In small bowl, measure margarine and salt. Pour hot water over these; stir until disolved and cooler. Add this mixture to yeast mixture and stir.

Begin adding flour mixed with wheat germ, beating well with wood spoon as soon as possible. Continue mixing in flour until all is used.

At the end you need to round up the dough with the hands, making one large loaf or two small ones. Grease the appropriate pans; flour them lightly, and place dough into pan. Or a round glass casserole can be used. This dough amount makes one 20-ounce loaf.

To raise the bread: Put pans into cold oven turning heat to low 35° C. until dough is partially risen. Then turn off heat; leave in oven until risen to double original height, 10 or 15 minutes.

Then turn heat up to hot 219° C. for 10 minutes to stop the rising and begin baking.

After 10 minutes, turn heat down to moderate 177° C. (or warm 163°C. for glass dish) to finish baking for about 20 minutes more.

It may be necessary to cover pans loosely with foil to prevent scorching after the high heat, but remove near the end to get good coloring.

Large loaf will take the 20 minutes (or 25 minutes if in glass) after rising; small loaves take only about 15 minutes after rising. Take one out and rap on top with knuckles to get hollow sound when done.

Remove bread from pans at once; cool on wire rack out of draught to get best crust.

Even white bread has good flavor when made of these simple ingredients.

The next venture should be what I call Beginner's Brown Bread, to make one large loaf or two small loaves.

The flour quantities in today's bread recipes can be handled by most normally active homemakers. Large quantities are almost impossible with any disability of hands or arm muscles. So stick to small batches of bread dough if more easily handled.

BEGINNER'S BROWN BREAD

1½ cups warm water
1 tsp sugar
1 tbsp yeast or 1 pkt
1 tbsp soft margarine
1 tsp salt
1¾ cups unbleached flour
1 cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
½ cup powdered skim milk

Into large warm mixing bowl, measure warm water. Add sugar, sprinkle yeast over surface. Let stand 10 minutes until bubbly.

Meanwhile, measure flours, wheat germ and milk powder into another bowl.

Then begin adding four mixture gradually to yeast mixture, beating with wooden spoon. This takes the place of kneading.

Continue adding flour mixture and stirring and turning dough with spoon until all the flour is used. Scrape sides of bowl down and form a loose ball of dough.

Add more flour to make a firmer dough.

Grease and flour a large bread pan or two smaller, and put dough in. Pans should be just abut half filled.

Once you have made these two most simple breads, you will have confidence to experiment with other ingredients — rye, oat or barley flakes, rice, soy and other grains.

And metric recipes are no problem if you have the metric cup and metric measuring spoons.

These breads will freeze well for later use if larger quantities are baked at one time.

Keep them wrapped in bread wrappers when cool, in the refrigerator between using, for they do not have preservatives to maintain freshness.

The breads you make at home, whether for yourself only or for a small or large family, will bring you a great deal of pleasure as well as better eating for less cost.

Yes, Yogurt Can Cut Cholesterol

I read in advertisements that yogurt is good for people who have high cholesterol. Is this true? — MRS. B.L.

DEAR MRS. L.:

For a long time, doctors have been interested in learning more about why so many of the people of the Caucasus live past the age of 100. It has been suspected that it is the yogurt in their diets that tends to lower cholesterol, thereby prolonging life.

Very recently, a group of doctors at the University of California, in Los Angeles, found that three cups of ordinary yogurt each day can reduce the serum cholesterol levels in the blood by about 9 per cent in a week. It's an interesting idea. There are, of course, many other dietary regimes which can effectively reduce cholesterol. Some drugs now available, when used in conjunction with these diets, produce gratifying results.

The exact reason why yogurt reduces cholesterol is still being investigated.

I have had polyps taken out of my nose six times in the last 20 years. Is there no way they can be prevented? — MR. F.T.

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

DEAR MR. T.:

A polyp is a grape-like mass of tissue that occurs in the lining of the nose or in the sinuses. They occur most frequently among people who have chronic allergy, infections or a combination of both.

Patients who have some allergic reaction in the nose frequently develop sinus infections. Germs grow and flourish in the warm, watery mucus. Polyps then develop singly, or more often, in bunches, especially when the underlying condition is neglected.

Many people do nothing about the polyps, the allergy or the infection until the nose is completely blocked and they can no longer breathe comfortably. When the polyps become large, they block the free flow of air through the nose and frequently impair the delicate sense of smell.

It has been my experience that when polyps are removed, and patients again begin to breathe freely, they often fail to continue treatment for their underlying allergy or infection. This, probably, is the reason why your polyps recur. It is imperative that patients who have had their nasal polyps removed by surgery continue treatment after surgery, in order to delay or prevent the recurrence of the nasal polyps.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . The depression of the elderly can be eased if we continue to let them know that they are still loved, wanted and respected.

Cooking for 1 or 2 a Real Challenge

Still some Christmas cheeses in the icebox? It's best to put them in a screw-top jar so your self-defrosting frig won't dry them out or moisture from other foods won't cause them to mold. If you freeze a chunk, cut it no thicker than two inches for best texture; defrost when needed in the refrigerator for best texture.

If stored onions accidentally freeze, keep them frozen until you need one or two; then chop away. If all are allowed to thaw, those not being used will turn mushy and be difficult to chop or slice. If potatoes have been stored where temperatures drop below 40 degree F., the starch has begun to change to sugar. Reverse this process by moving the potatoes to a warmer place for at least a week and hope the original flavor returns.

Plastic houseware producers are seeing their raw material prices soaring because of the world oil crisis. The situation's the same for makers of imported video games and other consumer products. In other words, the plastics you need will probably be stuck with higher price tags.

Cooking for one or two people requires special skills in planning and in purchasing, as "small quantity cooks" well know.

Recipes developed to feed from four to six people can be divided in half and made to serve only two, or they can be made as is and put into two smaller dishes, cooking one and freezing the other. This type of preplanning eliminates the unnecessary waste of food.

Purchasing groceries for two can be a challenge. "Family Packs" of meat are becoming very popular, but store butchers will almost always re-package their meat into smaller amounts upon customer request. This can be very handy if freezer space is limited.

Fruits, vegetables and dairy products are available in both small and large quantities.

Purchasing small quantities of breads and cereals can be difficult, however. Often, one or two people may not get through a loaf of bread before it becomes stale. It may be wise to purchase sliced loaves of bread and freeze them, taking out only what you need. This ensures that your bread will be fresh.

Plan to use leftovers for another meal. Casseroles are a great way to use up vegetables and meat. Leftover roasts can be sliced and frozen for use in sandwiches.

Some important points to remember when cooking for a small number of people are plan ahead and know serving sizes, planning quantities accordingly. Purchase only the quantity you need, or if you do buy a large amount such as a roast, plan a use for the leftovers.

ONION CHICKEN FOR TWO

1 large chicken breast, split
15 ml butter
2 ml salt
dash pepper
125 ml sauterne
25 ml water
50 ml french onion dip
250 ml hot, cooked rice
15 ml chopped, fresh parsley

Remove skin and bone from chicken breasts. In small skillet melt butter; brown chicken. Season with salt and pepper; add sauterne. Cover and simmer for 20-25 minutes until tender.

Remove chicken from skillet and keep warm. Add water to skillet, scraping browned bits from pan. Add french onion dip to skillet, stirring until well mixed.

To serve, place chicken on cooked rice and pour sauce over. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serve hot.

BISCUIT-TOPPED RHUBARB

75 ml sugar
dash cinnamon
375 ml fresh rhubarb, cut in pieces 3 cm long
125 ml water
10 ml butter
75 ml flour
25 ml sugar
2 ml baking powder
dash salt
25 ml butter
25 ml milk
1 ml organge peel
light cream

Combine 75 ml (⅓ cup) sugar and cinnamon in small saucepan; add rhubarb and water. Cook until boiling, stirring constantly; cook for two more minutes. Stir in butter. Pour fruit into two individual casseroles; set aside.

In medium bowl, sift flour, 25 ml (2 tbsp.) sugar, baking powder and salt together. Cut in butter. Stir in milk and orange peel. Form into two spoonsfuls and place one spoonful on top of hot fruit in each casserole dish.

WITH WINTER OVER, vegetables are beginning to come into the stores in quantity, and some prices are edging down. However, it pays to look the produce over carefully, as the shoppers here are doing.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I divorced after a 20-year marriage. My girlfriend has been living with me for the last nine months.

My eldest son, 19, has his girlfriend living with him, and the problem is that his girlfriend does not like my girlfriend at all. My son and his girlfriend told me they are getting married in July. They've made wedding plans and have decided that my ex-wife and I will be invited, but neither of us is allowed to bring a date. This plainly means the girl I live with is not invited.

I am ready to tell them that if I can't bring my girlfriend I will not attend, either. My girlfriend is so hurt that I'm not even sure she'd go if they changed their minds and invited her.

I'm leaving the decision up to you.

MIXED-UP MESS

DEAR MIXED-UP: First find out whether your son and his fiancee will change their minds and invite your girlfriend. If they won't, and you want a good relationship with your son, go without her. If they DO invite her, try to persuade her to attend with you. If she refuses, go alone.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about getting rid of door-to-door religious pitchmen reminded me of how I got rid of the first team I encountered.

I had just moved to California, after growing up under two religious influences — Episcopalian and Quaker.

A young mother, I was having one of those hectic days. The baby had just thrown a bowl of pablum on the foor, the older boy was smearing the dog with honey, the cat had just given birth to kittens on the clean clothes in the linen closet, and the vacuum cleaner had given up the ghost. At that point the doorbell rang. I answered it and was faced with two obese women, the daughter as wide as the mother. The mother, with no introduction whatsoever, sang out, "How would you like to live on this earth forever?"

My instant response was: "GOD FORBID!"

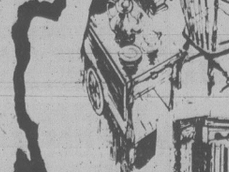

Talk about being stopped cold! They were totally speechless!

E.A.J.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.J.M.: Yes, I know obesity is unhealthy. But I refuse to starve myself to death in order to live a little longer.

"I'M NOT DEAF"

"I just don't understand some words or what some people say."

Pork Chops with Orange: A New and Tasty Linkup

60-MINUTE GOURMET

By PIERRE FRANEY

The world of food has such broad horizons; it is as amusing as it is astonishing how deeply agitated food enthusiasts can become over one recipe or another.

That is not to say that I, myself, will abide transgressions against classic French cooking and will not protest misnomers, in the name of Escoffier, as loud as possible.

What I have in mind are the supposed purists who are opposed to variances from what their palates are accustomed to. Some months ago, for example, a reader wrote to say that he was vehemently against putting any kind of sauce on fresh bay scallops because they suffered from any but the simplest methods of preparation: broiling or sauteeing.

My defence is that while I admire the simple preparation of the delicacy, cooking is, after all, an adventure and a well-made wine or cream sauce can be an admirable change. No need to point out the time-honored links of duck with orange (a l'orange); sole with grapes (Veronique), or game dishes with currant jelly, among others.

Within recent weeks I "created" a dish of pork chops with orange that was, to my taste — and to the taste to those who dined at my table — a worthwhile experiment. It came about because I had pork chops and a large, seedless orange that had been placed, accidentally perhaps, in a monthly shipment of grapefruit.

This is not a complicated recipe. It involves little of the tedium of preparing, for example, duck a l'orange or duck with cassis. The pork chops are cooked thoroughly for about half an hour (they will remain juicy), then are removed, and onions, various liquids (broth, lemon juice and tomato paste) and orange slices are added to the pan. The chops are served with the sauce. Rice with parsley is the obvious accompaniment.

Cotes de Porc a l'Orange
(Pork chops with orange)

4 loin pork chops, 1¼ inches thick
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 tablespoons butter
1 large seedless navel orange
½ cup finely chopped onion
Juice of half a lemon
1 cup fresh or canned chicken broth
1 tablespoon tomato paste
½ spoon sugar.

1. Sprinkle the chops with pepper.

2. Heat two tablespoons butter in a very hot skillet and add the chops.

3. Cook over moderately high heat—about 10 minutes, until nicely browned. Turn the chops and cook 10 minutes longer. Continue cooking, turning the pieces often so that they are evenly and thoroughly cooked. Turn the pieces on their sides to brown and crips the fat around the rim. Total cooking time should be about 30 minutes.

4. As the chops cook trim off the ends of the orange. Cut the unpeeled orange into eight rounds.

5. Remove the chops to a serving plater and pour off the fat from the skillet.

6. To the skillet add the onion. Cook, stirring, until wilted. Add the juice of half a lemon and stir to blend, cooking gently. Add the sugar, and salt and pepper to taste.

7. Add the orange slices. Add any juices that — have accumulated around the chops. Cook turning the slices, about three minutes.

8. Remove the orange slices from the skillet and arrange them around the chops. Swirl the remaining tablespoon butter into the sauce over all.

Rice With Parsley

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup raw rice
1½ cups water
1 bay leaf
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste; Tabasco ssuce to taste
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

1. Melt two tablespoons of the butter in a saucepan and add the onion. Cook until wilted. Add rice and stir briefly.

2. Add the water, bay leaf, salt, pepper and Tobasco.

3. Bring to the boil. Cover and simmer — 20 minutes.

4. Add the remaining butter and the parsley and stir to blend. Serve.

New York Times

Instant Yogurt To Cause Stir?

TEL AVIV (UPI) — An Israeli biochemist has developed an instant yogurt that he says will cost about half the real thing, but taste just the same.

Moshe Trop, 42, of Beersheba University's Research and Development Authority, says the mix — dehydrated acidified milk combined with bacteria and a special enhancing agent — can be turned into yogurt in less than an hour by stirring with cold water or milk.

Trop said in an interview with the Jerusalem Post that he expects his new formula to be on the market in a year.

He said he is negotiating with a local dairy concern and a group of overseas investors to start production.

Onions and Beef

Onions can be frozen and are convenient to have on hand. To freeze onions, remove the outer skin, root and stem ends. Chop and freeze on a tray before packing in freezer bags or containers.

When needed, just pull them out of the freezer and add to such recipes as this quick and easy-to-prepare recipe from Agriculture Canada:

ONION AND BEEF MEDLEY

6 cups onion, cut in wedges
3 tablespoons butter
1½ pounds ground beef
1 10-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
½ teaspoon marjoram
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 11-ounce package frozen mixed vegetables.

Brooding Caesar Plotting TV Return

TORONTO (CP) — Sid Caesar, the moon-faced comedian whose Your Show of Shows ruled television comedy throughout the medium's first decade, says he can't stand to watch today's situation comedies.

"I think comedy has to come of age again," Caesar said. "People settle for too little.

In Toronto to provide the voice in Nelvana Films' fourth animated half-hour TV cartoon special, Caesar, 57, the comedian now goes from one TV dramatic part to another, claiming to be waiting for a return to a comedy form which he feels is inevitable.

"Look at Roots. The network spent its money and took a chance. That's what they have to do with comedy. Sketch comedy has taken a beating. It's a lost art."

Caesar said he wonders how long the sitcoms can con people.

"It's the same as soap operas in the middle of the day. It takes 25 years for something to happen on soap operas.

"I know one where a girl's been waiting 78 years for her first kiss, yet she's pregnant by 14 other guys.

"Everything on TV is a spinoff of other shows. Why don't they line it up for 90 minutes straight. Spinoff of a spinoff of a spinoff right back to the original half-hour show. Wouldn't that be interesting?"

He also admitted he would really like to do something with a good situation comedy, if one came along.

And he confessed that he's done three situation comedy pilots aimed for next season, but "none of them will sell, they're terrible."

This Price Is Right For Horrible Horror

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Vincent Price, urbane sophisticate that he is, was asked why he is so closely associated with horror films.

He replied in his measured, mellifluous baritone, "For some reason my voice has a timbre that evokes mystery, melodrama and horror."

Married four years, the Prices have a delightful put-down, one-upmanship relationship which keeps them both amused and on their toes for ripostes.

With a sideward glance at Coral, a former star of the English theatre, Price went on: "In some 100 odd — very odd — movies only 20 of them were horror films. Some others, such as Laura were mysteries.

"I suppose the fact that I'm tall and speak with a theatrical voice contributes my association with the occult."

Vincent, who established himself as a movie menace in The House of Wax, and Coral are involved in mysterious goings-on in the new CBS-TV series, Time Express, a cross-country train on which passengers travel back through time in their lives to re-encounter personal crises.

Both Prices are delighted to have the opportunity to stay in their Beverly Hills home for a change. For most of their married life they have been on the road.

Vincent spent the past year and a half starring in his one-man show interpretation of Oscar Wilde, Diversions and Delights in 82 cities across the country.

"I loved every minute of it," he said, smiling.

Coral touched her ample bosom delicately in a gesture of minor anguish. "I'd rather thought of myself as Penelope.

"At any rate, I've become the greatest authority on American television. I spend my nights locked in hotel rooms alone with the tube in the middle of nowhere from 7 until 11 p.m. while Vincent is in the theatre. It's terrible."

"Coral is fortunate I didn't take her on the 72 one-night stands," Vincent said. "I didn't want to listen to her complain."

Two Extra Shows Scheduled

The musical drama, Saturday's Warriors, being staged Friday and Saturday at Victoria High School auditorium, has been completely sold out for both performances.

However there will be two extra performances at Vic High, Monday and Tuesday at 8 p.m. The production, with a cast of 100 mostly between the ages of 15 and 22, is good family entertainment although probably not suitable for children under the age of 8.

Anyone requiring information about tickets for the extra performances should phone Wayne Galbraith at 383-8975.

Western Winners

Western radio and television stations won nearly all the top awards announced Tuesday at a meeting of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters in Toronto.

Among the western winners were Victoria's CFAX, which took the John J. Gillin award for AM station of the year for its series of crime prevention programs.

BCTV won an award for Webster.

IN TRUE HOLLYWOOD tradition, Miss Piggy of The Muppets swishes up to famed Cocoanut Grove nightclub in Los Angeles to the flare of flashbulbs.

Intelligence Must Have Slipped . . .

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A Japanese Second World War veteran is searching a rugged Philippine mountain for a war buddy he believes has been hiding there for 34 years, disguised as a primitive tribesman and unaware the war is over.

The Japanese Embassy said today that grocery store owner Isao Miyazawa and two assistants were on Mindoro island looking for a man they think is Komiyo Nakaharu, an intelligence sergeant of the Japanese Imperial Army.

Between 200 to 300 Japanese soldiers disappeared in 1944 after American troops occupied Mindoro, a mountainous island facing the South China Sea 100 km. southwest of Manila.

It was on a small islet near Mindoro that Lt. Hiroo Onoda, also a Japanese army officer, surrendered to Philippine authorities in 1974 after hiding for 30 years in the jungles, unaware the war had ended.

The three-man party mounted its search following reports that a man with Japanese features and Japanese habits had been seen living with peaceful tribesmen called the Mangyan in the Rototuku village of Mindoro.

The man, known in the village as Mondoka, is married to a Mangyan woman and has seven or eight children, the embassy said. He makes his living by farming.

Miyazawa, 67, of Mito City, and Nakaharu, 57, of Ohita City, both worked in intelligence during the war and were friends in Japan.

Embassy officials said Miyazawa and Nakaharu were school mates in Tokyo's Nakano intelligence school, where they both underwent jungle survival training. Miyazawa said Nakaharu was trained in communications and may still have a high-powered radio with him from his war days.

Canada Plays Waiting Game In Recognition Of New Rulers

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada will not recognize the newly-elected Rhodesian government intil the United Nations sanction of that country is officially lifted, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday.

Jamieson, in Edmonton campaigning on behalf of local Liberal candidates, said he regrets that Canadians seem to be preoccupied with domestic affairs, particularly during the federal election.

"I know, it's really unfortunate."

Lift Sanctions, Muzorewa Urges

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, elected first black prime minister of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia — Rhodesia's new name, has appealed to Britain to lead the way in ending his country's years of political and economic isolation.

Muzorewa told a news conference within hours of the announcement of his victory Tuesday night that the colonial power from which Rhodesia seized independence in 1965 should take the lead by extending recognition to Zimbabwe Rhodesia and lifting trade sanctions.

"We have now completed the requirements of successive British governments and trust that Her Majesty's Government will now provide the lead to the international community in lifting sanctions and recognizing the government," he said.

Muzorewa's election triumph was marred by the reaction of his closest rival, veteran nationalist campaigner Ndabaningi Sithole, to his clear defeat. Sithole's party won only 12 seats.

Sithole alleged there had been gross irregularities during the election. He said he will not accept the verdict and demanded an investigation.

Muzorewa shrugged this off.

"We won't go without any sleep over that," the bishop said. "The government will discipline those who do not want to be law-abiding citizens."

Meanwhile, in Washington, a Republican congressman, Robert Bauman, today called on President Jimmy Carter to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia and recognize the country following its elections which "were more fair than some elections in our country."

Bauman, chairman of the American Conservative Union, addressed Carter while releasing a preliminary report from a team that observed the Rhodesian balloting.

"Our four-member ACU election-monitoring team has reported that the Rhodesian elections were free, fair and above-board," Bauman said. "In fact, in some respects, the Rhodesian elections were more fair than some elections in our country.

"The Rhodesians have met the provisions set forth in the International Security Assistance Act, which was adopted by Congress last year and signed by the president," Bauman said.

The group's election team, which visited 36 polling places and conducted interviews, concluding:

Under that legislation, Carter must lift the sanctions if he determines that fair elections were held and that the government has made a good-faith effort to negotiate an end to the war.

"While voters understandably did not have a sophisticated grasp of the political issues at stake in this election, our questions on this point brought one consistent answer: the belief (or hope) that it would bring about an end to the fighting."

Soviet Jews Arrive

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 600 immigrants reached New York on Tuesday and were greeted by thousands of friends and relatives at the start of the biggest airlift of Soviet Jews to the United States.

The immigrants arrived on three flights. They were among 10,000 refugees who waited months in Rome and nearby Italian communities for visas to enter the United States.

The backup of refugees in Italy resulted when the U.S. quota on immigrants from the Soviet Union was filled for the year. Under the same procedure used to allow entrance of Vietnamese refugees, the Carter administration lifted immigration quotas for the Soviet Union to allow up to 25,000 Soviet Jews to enter.

At the same time the Soviet Union is apparently trying to live up to terms of a U.S. congressional amendment barring trade benefits to the Soviet Union unless emigration policies are improved, said Gaynor Jacobson, executive vice-president of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

U.S. Tested Soldiers –1 Mile from N-Blast

By WALTER PINCUS

WASHINGTON (WP) — Thousands of soldiers and marines were exposed to radiation that may have exceeded permissible limits in 1953 Nevada nuclear manoeuvres in order to evoke their "fear responses" to nuclear war.

Documents obtained from the Army and other government sources revealed that before the test series began the Atomic Energy Commission warned that the troops might be endangered by harmful radiation. Responsibility for their safety was assumed by the Pentagon, according to official notes on the tests.

Today, some of those troops are contending their illnesses, such as cancer and genetic problems, stem from the radiation absorbed at the test shots 26 years ago.

The documents showed the troops were moved closer to ground zero after a 1952 test series proved "not realistic enough to evoke fear responses among the participating troops."

In 1952, when the manoeuvres were found by a study to be "not realistic tactical exercises," troops were in trenches or tanks 7,000 yards or 3.9 miles from the explosion when it went off.

In 1953, combat battalions were placed in trenches half that distance — just 3,500 yards — from one shot. Volunteers were allowed to be only 2,000 yards from another.

Documents from the early 1950s indicate a major purpose for using troops at actual nuclear tests was to determine what fear of nuclear warfare existed.

"The psychological implications of atomic weapons used close to our own front lines in support of ground operations are unknown," was the way the Military Liaison Committee to the AEC put it in a July 1951 document describing reasons for placing troops at tests in the fall of that year.

At the 1952 nuclear shot series, the Operations Research Office of The Johns Hopkins University was hired by the Army to test soldiers who participated in manoeuvres during three nuclear explosions.

To find out if the indoctrination information on nuclear weapons had any impact on troops, the army, at ORO's request, withheld from one company of soldiers all briefings on nuclear weapons and their effects except a short "safety instruction at a forward area on rehearsal day."

The ORO study found, over-all, that soldiers at the tests showed "a lack of changes in . . . emotional reaction."

From that finding, the researchers concluded, "either the psychological effects of atomic weapons are somewhat overrated and excessive fears of these weapons are not characteristic of Army troops or that the . . . manoeuvres with their emphasis on safety precautions and the virtual elimination of possible elements of danger were not realistic enough to evoke fear responses among participating troops."

The ORO report suggested "the effectiveness of training might be increased and the troops might be given more realistic and adequate preparation" if the manoeuvres were "more realistic, if some actual danger existed or if the troops were led to believe they might be in danger."

At the 1952 tests, the AEC had to approve the location of troops and the radiation level to which they were exposed.

For the next series of nuclear tests, the 1953 Upshot-Knothole series, the Pentagon sought full control over the positioning of troops and the right to establish radiation dose standards, "less conservative than those established by the AEC," according to the defence department plan presented to the AEC.

The AEC standard for an individual was 3,000 millirems over the entire test period. The Pentagon established a 6,000 millirem-per-test shot standard — 3,000 milirems of prompt radiation directly from the explosion and another 3,000 millirems from fallout.

According to notes of the AEC meeting of Dec. 23, 1952, the then-chairman, Gordon Dean, "observed that since the defence department apparently considered it necessary to conduct the exercises in this manner, the AEC was not in a position to recommend that the normal limits be observed."

Venus May Have Split Open Its Crust

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — A vast rift valley discovered by the Pioneer Venus Orbiter probe may be the result of planetary activity strikingly different than that experienced on Earth.

The 15,000-foot-deep, 900-mile-long valley — the largest yet discovered in the solar system — seems to be the work of internal planetary forces that have forced open the planet's crust. Most valleys on Earth are formed by erosion.

These were findings released today in a report from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center.

Other information relayed from Pioneer Venus Orbiter include evidence of a "polar vortex" near Venus' north pole, a 650-mile wide, roughly circular region of downflowing winds which may be a key mechanism in the planet's atmospheric circulation.

The report also presents findings which confirm reports of virtually continuous lightning between two and 32 kilometers above the planet's service, first detected by the Soviet Union's Venera probe last December.

"Chemical fires" due to reactions of various compounds in the super-heated atmosphere have been cited as a possible source for these eruptions of light, which occur as frequently as 25 times per second.

Electrical discharges like those which cause lightening on Earth have also been cited as a possible source although increased intensity close to the planet's surface and the unusually steady character of the glow make this explanation less likely.

Times' Men Defy

LONDON (Reuter) — Journalists at The Times voted Tuesday to work on a planned weekly overseas edition of their shut-down paper, against the instructions of their union.

Jake Eccleston, chairman of The Times unit of the National Union of Journalists (NUJ) said he was "extremely sorry" about the 101-to-93 decision.

He said he thought it would make negotiations more difficult on reopening the parent paper.

The Times, Britain's oldest daily, has not been published since Nov. 30 because of a dispute over the introduction of new technology which threatened the jobs of printers.

Bellingham Death Counts Come First

BELLINGHAM (AP) — Whatcom County authorities say Kenneth Bianchi will have to face trial on two local murder charges before any extradition to Los Angeles, where police say they are asking that he be charged in 10 killings attributed to the Hillside Strangler.

"Whenever we have a crime, it has to be handled, and we feel our case should be handled here first," said Whatcom County Prosecutor Dave McEachran.

Bianchi, 27, is accused of the Jan. 11 stranglings here of Karen Mandic, 22, and Diane Wilder, 27, both students at Western Washington University. Their bodies were found in the back of a car on an isolated cul-de-sac in Bellingham.

Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates announced Monday that his department, the Los Angeles County sheriff's office and Glendale police are seeking charges from the district attorney's office against Bianchi in 10 of the 13 Hillside Strangler slayings.

Bianchi has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the Bellingham slayings and is being held without bond in the Whatcom County jail. His lawyer, Dean Brett, met Monday with Bianchi but has declined comment on the Los Angeles accusations.

In Los Angeles, meanwhile, police spokesman Dan Cooke said the task force is still trying to pinpoint an accomplice they believe assisted in at least some of the stranglings.

No trial date has been set on the Bellingham stranglings. A sanity hearing, which could last two weeks, will probably be held next month.

Cambodia's Terror Trek

TAP PRIK, Thailand (AP) — Tens of thousands of Cambodians, sprayed by Vietnamese artillery fire and herded along in columns by Cambodian soldier-guards, trudged along the Thai border Tuesday and back into their own embattled country.

The tragic trek by more than 50,000 men, women and children began over the weekend when Cambodian troops loyal to ousted Premier Pol Pot were driven into Thailand by a major Vietnamese offensive in western Cambodia.

Pol Pot's radical communist regime was defeated in January after an estimated 100,000 Vietnamese soldiers backing Cambodian insurgents invaded the country. The ex-premier's forces then launched a guerrilla war against new government, while trying to control large masses of civilians trapped in the fighting.

Thai villagers told reporters the soldiers killed at least four or five civilians, and others who resisted the forced return to Cambodia were tied to bamboo poles and made to continue.

Those reports were not confirmed by Thai authorities.

But the authorities said more than 60 rounds of artillery, fired from inside Cambodia by the advancing Vietnamese, fell into the area of the mass march. The authorities said they had no casualty estimates.

A main group of some 50,000 Cambodians fleeing the battlefield was joined Tuesday by another column from inside Cambodia. The group marched south for about 15 kilometres along the frontier to this border village where it began crossing back into Cambodia.

About 2,000 Cambodian soldiers, some riding on motorcycles and in trucks, trailed the civilian columns and Thai authorities said they were there to ensure order and prevent any of the civilians from bolting. The rear guard of soldiers was reported still inside Tahiland late Tuesday.

Poison Bid Charged In Black Magic Trial

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (Reuter) — In a trial that already has brought admissions and accusations of black magic rituals, rape and bombings, an Australian nurse who joined a fringe religious sect faces charges today that she tried to poison a Swiss lawyer with cyanide-coated chocolate.

Katherine Bingham, 28, already has admitted taking part in a black magic campaign against opponents of the Indian-led Divine Light sect, based in the northern Swiss town of Winterthur, by sticking pins in wax effigies and leaving tokens in the opponents' gardens.

Today she will be questioned in court about accusations that she tried to murder Oskar Gutweniger at his Zurich home in December, 1975. An indictment says Gutweniger spat out the chocolate because it had a bitter taste.

Divine Light leader Swami Omkarananda, 49, Verena Plein-Schoeb, 28, radio electrician Josef Meichtry, 34, and West German Johannes Schaeben, 19, also have been charged with attempted murder involving bomb attacks.

Mrs. Plein-Schoeb testified Tuesday she had been raped in a ritual in which a chicken was killed and the blood poured over her body.

Omkarananda has denied the charges and a statement by Mrs. Plein-Schoeb that he had sexual relations with her.

"There is no sex at the DLC (Divine Light Centre)" he said. "There is no sex possible, thinkable, in relation to Swami Omkarananda."

Miss Bingham, who joined the Divine Light sect in 1973 after travelling through India from her home in Leonora, Western Australia, told the court Tuesday she had taken part in the black magic acts for about two months.

She had felt the swami was being cold and distant to her and she wanted to improve relations between them, she told the judges.

Miss Bingham said she had taken part in trips two or three times a week to distribute charmed objects in the gardens of neighbors of the sect who opposed the Divine Light Centre.

The prosecution said sect members turned to magic, poison and finally to explosives attacks because of continuing hostile relations with people living in the neighborhood.

Halt Laetrile Treatments, Parents Told

BOSTON (AP) — The parents of three-year-old leukemia victim Chad Green were ordered Tuesday to stop treating him with Laetrile and massive doses of vitamins and submit him to tests for cyanide poisoning.

The order was handed down by Judge Guy Volterra, who heard the couple's plea in January to treat their son with natural foods, vitamins, enzyme enemas and Laetrile.

Apartment-Living Chaos Follows New York Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — From Park Avenue to the outer reaches of Brooklyn and Queens, more than one million apartment dwellers were without regular elevator operators, doormen, and garbage collectors today in the second day of a strike of 25,000 building workers.

Tenants of many high-rise apartment buildings organized security squads, drawing up shifts for elevator duty and bringing down trash as the men who normally do these jobs were out on the sidewalk, hoisting picket signs.

Many had gone through the same thing for 17 days three years ago and had used the same strategies for survival then.

"They're doing their thing. They're into strike," said Wallace Martin, superintendent of 565 Park Avenue near 62nd Street.

Martin paused in the conversation to assure a woman tenant that when Rachel, her cook, arrived, she would be allowed past the new security guard posted at the entrance.

George Sutherland, building manager of 580 Park, said corporate executives who pay up to $2,400 a month maintenance on co-ops for which they may have paid up to $250,000 might enjoy playing at being elevator operators for a few days.

The city took steps to ease the possible hardships of an extended strike, setting up telephone numbers for medical emergencies and for complaints about lack of heat, hot water and other services.

Many large buildings hired private security men to replace the regular doormen and screen all visitors.

The strike was called against 3,000 buildings in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten island Tuesday after negotiations broke down, mainly over union demands for job security.

Gas-Rationing Plan Rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee gave President Carter's emergency energy conservation plans a rude jolt Tuesday by rejecting the idea of closing gasoline stations on weekends.

The House Commerce Committee voted 26-15 against sending the full House the proposal for weekend closings, which is one of four major ideas Carter proposed for handling fuel shortages. The committee voted to send a plan for controlling advertising lights to the House, but with a recommendation the House reject it.

A third proposal, to control non-residential heating and cooling, won a recommendation that the House approve it.

The votes in committee are in a sense a formality, because any proponent of the president's plans can ask the House directly to consider them.

But the committee votes are an important indication of the fate of the measures, and presaged a tough time for Carter's fourth and most important proposal: a standby system of gasoline rationing for the severest shortages.

Gasohol's Day Coming

By J. P. SMITH

WASHINGTON (WP) — One Senate aide calls it "the new laetrile." Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary says it's "a pipe dream."

Despite the gibes, gasohol has become one of the country's fastest-growing new energy sources, and one of the most intensely lobbied energy issues in Congress.

Consider what has happened in the past two years: As a result of legislation and federal rulings, gasohol today receives more federal subsidies for every unit produced than any other non-nuclear energy source, including oil, natural gas, or oil shale.

Gasohol distribution has spread from being a cottage industry to serving as the supplier for nearly 500 service stations in the Midwest.

Gasohol, a fuel mix of 10 per cent alcohol and 90 per cent gasolin, is now about to get another unexpected boost. Despite O'Leary's skeptical view of gasohol's long-term prospects the Department of Energy's (DOE's) alcohol fuels policy review report, soon to be released, endorses it.

According to DOE:

— While only about a million gallons of gasoline have been replaced by gasohol in the last few years, alcohol fuels could reduce annual demand for gasoline by at least 10 billion gallons — about 9 per cent of current U.S. gasoline consumption.

— Gasohol sells competitively at about the price of unleaded premium gasoline. Because alcohol fuels boost gasoline octane, they "could help alleviate shortages of unleaded gasoline."

— Alcohol fuels get identical or better mileage than gasoline, and can be burned in existing car or truck engines without damaging them.

— Most importantly of all, alcohol fuels can be distilled from nearly any animal or vegetable product containing starch and sugar, such as grain, cheese whey, wood, garbage, or paper.

Gasohol's backers, such as Scott Skylar of the National Council for Appropriate Technology, point out that anyone who questions whether gasohol works needs only to look at Brazil.

Brazil has committed $800 million to its gasohol program, which distils alcohol from sugar cane. Brazil expects to produce a billion gallons of alcohol by 1980. (This year, by comparison, DOE will spend $15 million out of its nearly $10 billion budget on alcohol research).

More Competition

LONDON (CP) — Students will have to fight harder for a place at university this fall, the central council of university admissions says. The council expects 167,000 applications for the term, 10,000 more than last year.

Bribery, Corruption Rock China Communist Party

By JOHN FRASER
Special to the Times

PEKING — The biggest single case of bribery and corruption within the ranks of the Communist party of China that has been pubicly acknowledged have highlighted recent editions of the Peoples Daily.

To Westerners, inured to multi-million dollar acts of larceny, the sum involved may not seem vast (about $400,000) but in a poor Communist country it ranks as an all time shocker.

More importantly, it sheds light on what appears to be a serious problem within the party in coping with large numbers of middle-level bureaucrats as well as more senior officials who act like old-time overlords throughout the country and aren't at all averse to lining their pockets with public funds and appropriating state property.

In another article printed in the Guangming Daily a few days ago, it was pointed out that more than half of the Communist party's 35 million members have joined since the cultural revolution began and consequently "know very little about the party's fine tradition and style of work."

Coming at a time when the authorities are arresting and generally repressing some of the most idealistic young people in the country, the accounts of party corruption and high-handedness provide some stunning contrasts in theory and practice.

Observers here feel that the story of Wang Shouxin, a party branch secretary in Heilongjiang Province, is being used as an object lesson for a large number of other comrades who have been playing fast and loose with the public purse.

Mrs. Wang was also the manager of a northeast fuel company and she used both her positions to siphon off 536,000 yuan over a period of seven years. The figure represented twice the amount of the company's fixed assets. To pull off this caper, she enlisted the support of company and party officials for miles around. Even the local branch of the Bank of China managed to turn a blind eye to the fancy bookwork.

According to the Peoples Daily there had been complaints about Mrs. Wang and the "faction" around her for several years. Those complaints took the form of written accusations about embezzlement, bribery, extravagance and waste.

However, it appears that Mrs. Wang had things so tied up in her local county that those letters never went anywhere and the people writing them were persecuted.

The Peoples Daily reported that the 58-year-old woman and some of her co-conspirators have been arrested but the investigation continues, an indication of how widespread the corruption was.

Pollution Payoff Increased

LONDON (Reuter) — Maximum compensation for oil pollution caused by sea accidents has been increased to $57 million, a United Nations group said Tuesday.

The UN Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization said a French proposal to increase the amount from $38 million was adopted by the International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund last week.

Diesel Study to Take Time

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — A U.S. Department of Energy official said Tuesday it might take government scientists four years to determine finally whether diesel exhausts pose a serious cancer threat.

However, department Assistant Secretary Ruth C. Clusen said preliminary tests on diesel emissions would be finished within a year and might dictate tough new restrictions on U.S. automakers who are expanding production of diesel cars to meet government fuel economy standards.

"By that time we should have a good indication of whether there is any cause for concern and whether there are technologies to deal with this problem," she said.

The Environmental Protection Agency already has proposed some regulations limiting particulate — or soot — emissions from diesel engines beginning in 1981. The agency also is conducting cancer research on diesel soot.

However, Miss Clusen said the EPA tests were "rather quick" and might not yield satisfactory answers as to the long-range effects.

"There is a lack of conclusive evidence with animals and human beings," she told reporters at a department conference on alternate fuels and engines. "It is our intent to fill the gaps."

She said the department would conduct a two- to four-year study to determine the makeup and effects of diesel soot and whether there is any technology to solve the problem.

The Department of Transportation, NASA, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health and the auto industry also are working on diesel emission research, she said.

"But it will be the EPA who makes the final decision in terms of emission regulations," Miss Clusen said.

Last week, the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability criticized the EPA's proposed diesel soot standards, saying they were too stringent, too expensive and might stem further development of fuel-efficient diesel cars.

Miss Clusen said she disagreed with the council and called the criticism "an overstatement of the problem."

U.S. Security Mail Snoops Still Alive

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Postal Service Tuesday announced plans to renew the monitoring of mail for "national security" reasons despite a federal court decision holding the practice unconstitutional.

Under such "mail covers," a postman — usually at the request of the FBI — records the names, addresses, postmark and other data on envelopes addresssed to or from particular persons in whom the law enforcement agency is interested.

The plans of the Postal Service brought an indignant response from Frank Askin, a general counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union and victor in the court battle outlawing "national security" covers.

The decision by Judge Lawrence Whipple in the New Jersey District Court held that mail covers were legitimate to investigate a criminal act or pursue a fugitive. But to justify the technique on "national security" grounds, he held, "is too ambiguous and broad."

The case before Whipple was brought by a school girl, Lori Paton, who in 1973 tried to write to the Socialist Labor Party for a high school project. She mistakenly sent the letter to the Socialist Workers Party whose mail was under a cover ordered by law.

Lori's letter brought an FBI agent to her school and she sued for damages.

Whipple held that the "national security" reasons lacked "precision" and it is just this that the Postal Service now attempts to supply.

Its new rules would define "national security" as a defence against "an attack or other grave hostile act; sabotage or international terrorism; clandestine intelligence activities or the conduct of foreign affairs or military policies in opposition to those foreign and military policies of the United States which are intended to protect the United States from the foregoing enumerated actual or potential threats."

The public has 30 days to comment in writing on the new rules. Then the Postal Service can adopt them, modify them or go back to the drawing board.

Braun was unable to supply a tally of the number of mail covers now in force. In 1973, the most recent year for a full breakdown, there were 4417 mail covers of which 260 were instituted for "national security."

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

GARDENING hilda beastall

Garden Notebook An Invaluable Tool

Labelling seed sowings in the garden and recording them at once in a permanent garden notebook may seem an unnecessary waste of time, and so it may be to one in a million gardeners.

But most of us, even though dedicated to the work, have other things going on at the same time. For us, the few moments spent recording our sowings are certainly worthwhile.

Of the two, the written record perhaps is the more important, but marking the rows with a little piece of wooden stake at each end must be also done. You then know where the seedlings are to be expected and where to sprinkle each day or twice a day until they appear.

The written record should have the first column marked for date of sowing. This acts as a guide each year when wondering what to sow and when, although spring sowings still depend on current weather.

So the third column will be headed "Variety".

Leave plenty of space for this third column, or add a fourth column headed simply "Remarks". We all know how remarks can vary in length and importance.

Column three or four may record data such as date when several sproutings were noted, if no germination occurred and possible reason, approximate weather conditions noted in the garden site to account for speedy or slow growth and — as important as any — the results obtained such as first pulling of usable carrot thinnings, lettuce, green onions and beets.

And to settle many an argument, record the big day when a ripened tomato is taken from the plant and shared around with the family, remembering to put this information next to the variety.

At the end of the season of any one crop, whether it be pansies, squash or the first sowing of lettuce or carrots, there should be your own evaluation of results.

You may decide, for instance, that pansies were all right in cool weather but finished quickly in when it got hot. So why not put them in early morning sun another year, shaded all afternoon?

Note if carrots attracted carrot rust-fly, and if so whether early or late sowing or both. Note, too, how many days elapsed from sowing of radish seed to maturity.

Note also the pickings of fruits such as strawberries, raspberries and currants, though these will have no sowing dates. Times and quantities are important perhaps in deciding when you take a holiday away from home, or at home to deal with the economical use of the crop.

Record also the differences in lettuce and cabbage maturity for the various kinds sown. And the same with peas and beans. Some come quickly to perfection and so must be sown in small numbers. Summer squash, zucchini and scallop, come to usable size within a few days of pollination.

All these items in your records are educational. Having your records in a permanent looseleaf or scribbler adds interest in your own garden project and keeps your mind free to acquire new knowledge day by day.

Start one now whether you garden on a balcony or patio, in an allotment garden or in a regular residential garden. With time, your garden notebook will prove its worth.

Family Fitness Festival Slated

Clubs, organizations and individuals on the Saanich Peninsula are combining forces to hold the first annual Peninsula Family Fitness Festival this Friday and Saturday.

The festival — the first of several community fitness festivals to be held in B.C. this year — is sponsored by the provincial government through the office of provincial fitness co-ordinator Wendy Robertson.

The festival will be centred around the Panorama Leisure Centre in Sidney.

There will be a walk Saturday in which participants will walk, hike, roller skate, skateboard or use any other method of locomotion that involves heart and lung power, leaving at noon from three different locations to arrive at the Panorama Leisure Centre by the 1:30 p.m. opening ceremonies.

The departure point for those taking part in the family competition will be Parkland school. The other departure points are Tulista Park at Fifth Street in Sidney and the Saanichton fairgrounds at East Saanich Road near Wallace Drive.

At the centre, Action B.C. and the B.C. Heart Fund-YM-YWCA fitness program staff will be on hand to test for heart fitness.

The B.C. Wheelchair Association, which will field a team in the morning competition, will present a wheelchair obstacle and slalom course and provide wheelchairs for the able-bodied to try their hand.

The co-operative and day-care centres on the peninsula will run a pre-school activity village for youngsters and their parents.

There will be fencing, archery, tennis, golf, rhythmic gymnastics, disco dance, sailing, square dancing and other events involving every age group.

There will be a family dance with chili and cheese at 5 p.m.

Hydro Proposal Lacking: Bonner

Power costs will increase substantially if B.C. Hydro is broken up as proposed by a legislative committee, Hydro chairman Robert Bonner said Tuesday.

Bonner defended the corporation against a toughly worded attack on the way the utility handled construction of three Columbia River dams, saying the committee should have praised B.C. Hydro for its successes.

The committee report, released Monday in Victoria, said the company should be carved up into autonomous subsidiaries with specific responsibility for construction, electrical sales, gas distribution and administrative services. B.C. Hydro itself could be a non-operating holding company and financial agent.

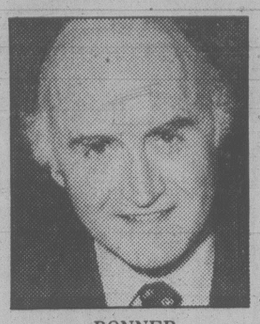

The report also warned that the province's financial credibility could be debased if the corporation carries out current projects as it did the Columbia River dams.

Premier Bill Bennett, campaigning for the May 10 provincial election, said Tuesday in Campbell River that he agreed with the conclusion by the committee that the utility should be broken up.

Bonner said however, that the committee misled itself in believing that dismantling the corporation would be beneficial.

"The usual result of fragmentation is higher costs and that should be avoided in the public interest," Bonner said. "It is difficult to imagine what good result would come of it."

Bonner said that, considering the problems B.C. Hydro has to face, it is remarkably efficient and he would compare it to any other large public utility.

BONNER

"I'd stack this outfit up against anyone for efficiency and public service," he said.

"I think it is a pretty damn good outfit. It would be a mistake to break it up."

On the committee's criticism that in building the Duncan, Arrow and Mica dams on the Columbia River the company had miscalculated financing, Bonner said he did not see how the committee could apply "intelligent hindsight" to developments that started years ago.

"I think the report is lacking in its failure to point out that the Columbia dams were engineering triumphs. In almost every case they were constructed under difficult natural conditions."

Bonner said if the builders of the dams had to choose between costs and safety, the choice was obvious.

"You don't send a man to the moon on the basis of a lowest tender," said Bonner.

The B.C. Hydro chairman, a former Social Credit MLA, said the cost overruns on dam construction arose largely from the unpredictability of geology.

"If geology was a precise science, there would never be a dry hole in the oil industry and never be a mine that failed," Bonner said.

"Frankly, I think the report should have praised the management and the work force in the Columbia projects. We never pay enough attention to the successes of our people and in this respect the report is a notable failure."

Bonner said he would not comment on Bennett's remarks about the report, saying that the government wants to change the structure of the utility, it has the power to do so.

"The legislature created the corporation and it can break it up."

Investigator Appointed

VANCOUVER (UPC) — An allegation by two police officers that provincial human resources workers could have saved the life of a 10 month-old baby who was beaten to death has prompted an investigation by the province.

At the request of Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy, provincial Attorney-General Garde Gardom appointed Richard Bird, an assistant deputy minister, Tuesday to head an investigation into the policemen's claims.

Cough Syrup Stolen

When the man failed in a bid to hurl a rock through a window because of unbreakable glass installed by the pharmacy after a break-in a month ago, he peeled off moulding, lifted out a pane and entered the store.

Mental Health PR Readied

Mental Health Week will be marked next Wednesday by the Victoria branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association (CMHA).

There will be an open house at the CMHA Laurel House activity Centre, at 1450-52 Elford, from 2 to 4 p.m.

"We would like people to see what we are doing at the centre to rehabilitate people with mental health problems," administrator Joan Dumka said.

"There will be a display of crafts and refreshments will be available."

The Victoria branch of the CMHA is a non-profit organization comprised of staff and volunteers who provide programs for people recuperating from mental illness.

While some people are restored to mental health quickly, Dumka said for others it's a long road to full recovery and some never quite make it.

"What we need is volunteers to help operate our programs and we'd really like people who might be interested to contact our office."

Another objective of the CMHA is to promote mental health.

Dumka said during 1979 the association will be stepping up its activities to try to prevent mental and emotional problems before they occur and to meet the emotional needs of children and adults who need support.

As a start, members of the association will distribute pamphlets and brochures on mental health at the Hillside Shopping Centre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Sawmill Rezoning Plan Held Jumping the Gun

DUNCAN — Area residents and preservationists have lodged protests with North Cowichan municipal council over its intention to change the zoning of Doman Industries sawmill property in the Cowichan estuary from rural to heavy industry.

Fearing noise and visual pollution, the Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society requested a delay in rezoning until the Cowichan Estuary Task Force report is released and accepted by the public.

A letter from the Society, one of three to the municipal council objecting to the rezoning move, also supported Khenipsen Road property holders who are concerned that rezoning will depress property values in the area.

Khenipsen Road spokesman Carol Skinner also warned that boundaries of the area considered for rezoning may be in dispute.

Pointing out that area maps differ in the amount of land within certain property lines, Skinner asked:

"How can a development permit area be designated when the area in question does not have rigidly defined boundaries?"

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	2 ♢	4 ♡	5 ♢
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — six of hearts.

Let's assume you get to five diamonds on the bidding shown and West leads a heart. East wins with the king and returns the four of spades. Should you play the jack or the king from your hand?

Of course, anyone seeing all four hands could argue strenuously that the king is the right play — and it would be hard to refute that contention. However, in real life, where you see only the North-South cards, you have quite a problem deciding whether to play the jack or the king of spades.

How do you solve problems of this type? To begin with, you start by theorizing that it makes no difference at all which card you play if West has the A-Q (or even if East has the A-Q). The only two cases that matter are those where West has the ace and East the queen, and those where West has the queen and East the ace. In both these cases, your decision is crucial.

Making the right choice is not a matter of luck. Why? Because you can't make the contract unless the club finesse succeeds, and once you assume that West has the king of clubs it follows that East has the ace of spades. This is because East would not have the values for an opening bid without the ace of spades.

The principle that applies here occurs in many deals. As a declarer, you must sometimes make an assumption that a particular defender has a particular card — because to assume otherwise would mean giving up the contract without trying to make it. Your assumption that West has the king of clubs may turn out to be wrong, but if proceeding on that assumption offers the only chance for the contract, you are simply playing bridge the way it should be played.

Tomorrow: Looking far into the future.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 26, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Accent on payments, collections, diversifying, expanding horizons, estimating vacation and travel costs. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You learn a secret. Your earnings potential is sharply increased, not necessarily in that order.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Your position is strengthened. You regain sense of direction. Judgement, intuition are on target. You no longer are "trapped" by red tape. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons figure in your personal scenario. Number 4 could play key role.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Check sources, keep secrets, be discreet, don't divulge sources. Deduct, analyze, find reasons — don't be satisfied merely to know something occurred. Find out why it happened! You will dispel fears, doubts.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Accent on romance, wishes, persuasion, diplomacy, abuse of dietary rules, purchase of art object or luxury item. Life style or domestic adjustment is on agenda. Family member wants to discuss residence, why, where, when, cleaning up process.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Obstacle equals challenge, block is transformed into steping-stone. Superior is on your side, whether or not you are aware of it. You learn, perceive, communicate. Brooding is negative. Being alone is not same as being lonely. Yes, you will comprehend!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Lunar aspect indicates travel, writing, overcoming language and distance barriers. You gain spiritual insights. You productively pursue educational projects. You gain by "sticking with" number 9. Aries is in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Be aggressive where digging for facts is concerned. Someone may be attempting to hide a "financial manoeuver." Protect yourself. Check signals with partner or mate. Information is gained outside orthodox avenues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): You "know" you made right move. Uncertainty results from new or different environment. Leo, Taurus, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Yes, you should maintain an independent stance. You get chance to renegotiate agreement or contract.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Go slow, maintain low profile, attend to basic tasks. One who "depends" upon you confides secret. Follow through on hunch. Be open minded, not gullible. You will receive reliable guidance concerning employment and health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Accent on significant changes, children, added responsibility, the imprinting of style, a relationship that is intensified. Gemini, Sagittarius and Taurus individuals figure prominently — so does the number 3.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Stick to facts — take a stand, complete transaction. Another Aquarian figures in picture. You gain insights into property values, basic structures, quality materials. Older person will share benefit of experience.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Exchange ideas, be confident, confront relative who complains, take short journey, catch up on correspondence. Yes, stress is on activity as contrasted to procrastination. Gemini person commands key role.

IF APRIL 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you can handle pressure, responsibility, more so than the average person. You are dynamic, attractive and you usually "get your way" with opposite sex. You have a knack for business, organization, getting most for time and money. Cancer, Capricorn persons play key roles in your life. You are determined, stubborn, innovative and you never do things halfway. June could be your most significant month of 1979, a year which features consolidation, enjoying fruits of discoveries and contacts made in '78. In May, a relationship is tested. In June, you make more money — and could marry. If already married, you make "serious investment." In July, you complete an assignment and you'll be rid of a burden.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"A matter of doubles," Peter replied. "Doug's and Jane's ages total twice Clare's age. Clare's and Bill's total twice Jane's, Jane's and Bill's and Clare's ages total twice Doug's, and Bill is just nine years old."

Houses Eyed for Royal Oak

One of the major landowners in the area proposed for the Royal Oak industrial park told Saanich council Tuesday night he now favors residential development for his land.

Art Kool is preparing a proposal which would see a large chunk of property in the northwestern corner of the proposed industrial park developed for townhouses.

The site area of about 35 acres south of Mann Avenue (including 22 owned by Kool himself) accounts for more than one-third of the 92 acres of "net developable" land in the industrial park.

Kool told council his plan was a compromise designed to meet the wishes of area residents, who are generally opposed to further industrial development, and other landowners who still want to see the industrial park go ahead.

Council agreed to schedule a public meeting May 2 when municipal staff reports on Kool's proposal will be available.

Ald. Sandy Noel noted that Kool had at various times sought permission for industrial, residential and commercial development of his land, and asked if he could change his mind yet again.

He could, Kool replied, but it all depended on council's and the public's attitude.

A few weeks ago, before council called for a fresh public hearing on the Royal Oak industrial park proposal, Kool indicated he sees little or no difference in the economic return of a residential project as opposed to industrial development.

A municipal planning department official told the Times this attitude has probably weighed the advantage of a relatively quick return on a residential project — an average of two to three years — against the uncertainty of industrial development prospects.

Although Saanich municipality would bear the "front-end" costs in servicing the industrial park, and recover the cash from landowners through a levy spread over 20 years, the owners would have to start paying the charge immediately.

"Industrial sites tend to fill up fairly slowly and they might have quite a wait," the official noted.

Picket Closes PSAC Offices

The Vancouver Island regional office of the Public Service Alliance of Canada at Quadra and Market has been closed by a one-woman picket.

Office employee Catherine Hauswirth went on strike Tuesday to back up a demand for a first contract with the 182,000-member PSAC.

The union's office in Vancouver is also shut down as Hauswirth's counterpart there, Darlene Doiron, is off the job. The women make up a two-member certification of the Office and Technical Employees Union.

Hauswirth said it is ironic that the PSAC, which is canvassing candidates in the May 22 federal election for their opinions on collective bargaining rights for employees, doesn't want its own workers unionized.

"They just don't want to be involved with another union," she said today.

The OTEU won the certification for the two PSAC regional offices in March, 1978 but has been unsuccessful in gaining a first contract.

The PSAC wants all meetings to take place in Ottawa while the OTEU says it is unreasonable to go that far to negotiate for two people.

John Hart, PSAC Vancouver Island regional representative, is the only other person who works in the Victoria office. He remained off the job Tuesday and today.

Hauswirth said she will stay out until she gets a contract.

She said the strike comes at a busy time for the office as the representatives are involved in political action in connection with the federal election.

The two women are seeking parity with their counterparts in various other Victoria and Vancouver union offices. Hauswirth said she makes about $11,000 a year, $3,000 less than the union office employees.

Staff Adequate: Manor Nurses

An inquest into the May 15 death of an elderly woman in Oak Bay Manor was adjourned Tuesday to April 30 after hearing testimony from two nursing supervisors.

Mrs. Florence Scarth, 95, was found dead beside her bed with a restraining jacket partially covering her throat and face.

The woman asphyxiated.

Patricia Threfall, who has been director of nursing since Feb. 11, told the jury there was no indication that Mrs. Scarth was uncomfortable or disturbed during the night.

The staff had performed its usual duties and had visited the patients as regularly scheduled, she said.

She said she could not see the fact that a night staff of three, two less than usual, had any bearing.

Questioned on the restraint jacket, she said the usual practice was to secure it to the bed with enough slack to allow patients to turn over on their side.

Weekend supervisor Susan Hopewell said Oak Bay Manor compared favorably with New York hospitals at which she had worked.

She said staffing was a little short but adequate, and added that with more staff around, more patients are disturbed during the night.

Meanwhile, an inquest in the death of Millicent Steele, found in similar circumstances to Mrs. Scarth the same morning at Oak Bay Manor, starts tonight.

Amnesty Writes To Help Children

A letter-writing campaign to help children who have lost parents or are imprisoned in Argentina is being mounted by local members of Amnesty International.

Mrs. Thelma Macmurray and Mrs. Susan McNay have compiled lists of local organizations and will ask them to get their members to write to Argentinian authorities in an effort to focus attention on the plight of the children during the International Year of the Child.

The local members have recently received from the organization's British headquarters a report on conditions in Argentina since the military coup of March 24, 1976.

The report tells how mothers gather in the Plaza de Mayo every Thursday in silent protest outside government house, risking their own arrest and disappearance in order to get news of their missing children and other relatives.

The organization was formed in 1961 to work for the release of individuals imprisoned for reasons of race, religion or conscientiously-held beliefs.

It received a Nobel Peace Prize in 1977.

Massey stresses Amnesty International does not get involved in any political angles, its members relying on steady streams of "very polite letters" to achieve their aims.

For the first time in its history the local branch of Amnesty International will open its meeting to the public Tuesday.

Floods of Century Feared

S. Manitoba Residents Urged to Flee Homes

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Red River Valley residents south of Winnipeg were urged to leave their homes today as Manitoba braced for what could be the worst flooding of this century.

Warned that latest forecasts show the Red could rise perhaps half a metre above 1950's major flood levels in areas south of Winnipeg, Premier Sterling Lyon asked all those endangered by rising flood waters to leave their homes voluntarily.

Six Winnipeg hockey arenas were being turned into reception centres for evacuees arriving from flood-stricken regions south of here.

Set up by the Emergency Measures Organization (EMO), Red Cross and Salvation Army, the centres will provide food, lodging, clothing and other services for people who do not have friends or relatives to stay with until the swollen river subsides.

Depending on the response to his appeal for a voluntary evacuation, it was understood Lyon might move today to issue a compulsory evacuation order for some 15,000 valley residents.

The 5,000 or so people living within ring dikes, built around communities more than a decade ago, could be stranded by water for as long as two weeks, he said.

Light rain fell over southern Manitoba Tuesday night, boosting rivers and streams already swollen by spring runoff. The immediate outlook was for showers.

The flood crest is predicted on the Red River next Monday at the border town of Emerson, and May 4, south of Winnipeg.

Although the Red River flows through it, Winnipeg itself is considered safe from major flooding because of the local floodway, built after the disastrous 1950 flood to divert water around the city.

Women and children in flood-stricken areas were being advised to leave their home today, able-bodied men were asked to stay behind to maintain dikes. The voluntary evacuation area stretches 40 kilometres on either side of the Red River south of Winnipeg.

Meanwhile, it was unclear what response there would be to the voluntary evacuation appeal. Morris, Man., businessman Richard Zilkie said he and a number of others had no intention of evacuating their flood-threatened town.

"They can't scare me so quick," he said, squinting at the grey sky through the drizzle. "I did it before — in '48, '50, and '66. Maybe my wife will go but I got to stay here and look after the business."

However, Alvin Dyck, who owns an electronic equipment store in Morris, was in the midst of packing his entire inventory so that he could leave town today.

Ron Affeldt, director of North Dakota's emergency services, said flooding in the state so far has caused more than $15 million in damage to state property alone.

Affeldt estimated total flooding damage in 42 counties of North Dakota at $52 million and said the situation is the worst disaster in recent state history.

In Saskatchewan, scores of volunteers spent the night piling sandbags at the village of Roche Percee, about 15 kilometres east of Estevan, and had saved 18 valley homes from the flood waters of the Souris River.

Israel, Egypt Sign

Times News Services

OM KHASHIBA, Sinai — Israel and Egypt exchanged documents ratifying their historic peace treaty today after a last-minute dispute over the Palestinian autonomy issue delayed the ceremony for two hours and 20 minutes.

The formal ceremony ratifying the treaty signed March 26 in Washington was conducted at this remote desert surveillance station.

After the honor guards drew up and the Israeli and Egyptian bands started to play, a dispute arose over the side letter to the treaty covering negotiations procedure on autonomy for Palestinians living in the Occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

Sources said Egypt wanted to include the letter in the package of documents and Israel wanted it left out. After the delegations conferred and contacted Cairo and Jerusalem, the dispute was resolved. Israeli sources would not say how the issue was settled.

The exchange took place in bright sunlight under the flags of Israel, Egypt, the United Nations and the United States at a table covered by a green cloth.

Israeli delegation leader Eliahu Ben-Elissar, director of the prime minister's office, called the treaty "a rendezvous with history."

"Ours is a past, a present and a future that began with a common forefather, Abraham, and that will live on forever just as our ancient nations shall always live."

The ceremony originally was planned to be held in both Jerusalem and Cairo. It was changed to the American-run watch station in a

Grits Cheer At 5-point Gallup Lead

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Liberal strategists were ecstatic today that the latest Gallup poll showed Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau with a five-point bulge over the Tories.

They saw it as a confirmation about their optimism for the May 22 federal election, and as proof that a CBC poll showing the Tories ahead was wrong.

"That's what I told you ... the CBC report is dead wrong," Chief Liberal planner Jim Coutts said.

Coutts said the Gallup poll, conducted during the second week of the campaign, "is what I expected."

The results show the Liberals had gained two percentage points in a month, climbing to 43 per cent of the decided voters.

The NDP was also up, gaining two points to 17 per cent, while the Tories dropped three per cent to 38.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent was also happy with the figures.

"Obviously I am pleased ... It is encouraging, at least it is an indication people are responding to issues we think are important," he told reporters in an impromptu press conference aboard his jet.

He said the undecided vote seemed to be breaking his way, and predicted his party would do even better in subsequent polls.

The undecided vote dropped three points to 32 per cent of those surveyed.

Trudeau press aide Pat Gossage said the prime minister was pleased "especially for party workers," but she added: "I don't think they (polls) have much effect on Trudeau himself."

As expected, the Liberals continued to dominate in Quebec with the support of two-thirds of committed voters. The remaining votes in the province were evenly split between the Conservatives and Social Credit. A surprising 43 per cent, however, were still uncommitted.

In western Canada, on the other hand, the Conservatives were backed by about half the decided voters while the Liberals were "slightly but not significantly" ahead of the NDP.

In Ontario, the Conservatives were "marginally but not significantly" ahead of the Liberals with the support of about four in ten committed voters. Only 25 per cent were still undecided.

Teck Plans $150M Mine

Canadian Press

Teck Corp. of Vancouver announced plans Tuesday for a $150 million development of a new copper-molybdenum mine in the Highland Valley, about 65 kilometres southwest of Kamloops.

Company chairman former governor-general Roland Michener described the development as the largest investment ever made in a single metal mine.

New Democrat leader Dave Barrett said that he welcomes the Teck announcement, adding an NDP government would not reintroduce the mineral royalty tax.

The Social Credit government abandoned the tax saying it had caused exploration to drop drastically.

Teck president Dr. Norman Keevil had said in an interview in Vancouver that the project may be threatened if the New Democratic Party is elected in the May 10 British Columbia election.

Keevil said Teck would have to refinance the project if the NDP renewed royalties legislation which the party introduced when it was in power from 1972 to 1975.

Michener told a news conference at Teck headquarters in Toronto that the project is being undertaken "at a time when there is little mining development in Canada."

Construction, to start this spring, will take about 18 months and employ 500 workers at peak periods. The mine will provide 400 permanent new jobs.

Annual output for the mine was estimated at 50,000 pounds of copper and 4,500,000 pounds of molybdenum. The mill will produce at the rate of 25,000 tons a day.

Teck will own 30 per cent of the development while Highmont Mining Corp., of Vancouver, a Teck subsidiary, will own 70 per cent.

Michener said financing has been arranged through the Bank of Montreal.

All of the molybdenum output will be sold to Metallgesellschaft, a major German mining concern which announced Monday it had increased its interest in Teck to 18 per cent from 14 per cent.

Liquor Prices Taking Leap On May 1

The prices of most Canadian spirits and liquors will jump May 1 — some by as much as $1.65 per 40 ounce bottle, the Times has learned.

Details of the increases are being kept under a tight lid but it is understood that some 40 ounce bottles will go up by $1.65 while some 26 ounce bottles of spirits will increase by 75-80 cents.

It is also understood that Scotch may escape the May 1 hikes because of recent price increases to that item.

Liqour Distribution Branch spokesman Joyce Courtney confirmed from Vancouver today that a wide range of price hikes will take effect next Tuesday, but she declined to say just what items will be increased or what the price changes will be.

"The majority of the changes will be on Canadian spirits and liquors. It doesn't include beer or wine; that's about all I can say right now," said Courtney.

She added that the price hikes will not be done on an across-the-board percentage basis, but rather some items will have minor increases while others will jump substantially.

In Vancouver representatives for both Joseph E. Seagram and Sons Ltd. and Potter Distilleries Ltd., confirmed that price increases are on the way, but declined to release any details.

Unions Divided at Pacific Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pressmen have ended joint bargaining with other Pacific Press unions after a mediator's report said they must ease their stand if a strike-lockout that shut down the Sun and the Province almost six months ago is to be resolved.

Phil Needham, co-chairman of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions at Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the evening Sun and morning Province, said Tuesday night the pressmen left the council Monday. He doubted whether they would be present when talks resumed today.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman estimates that the strike, which began last Nov. 1, has cost the company $7 million to $8 million a month in lost revenue and cost employees about $2 million a month in lost wages for a total loss approaching $60 million.

Mediator John Kagel, a San Francisco lawyer, has imposed a news blackout on the talks.

However, The Canadian Press news service obtained a copy of his confidential report dated April 20 which says the pressmen's union must show a greater willingness to bend on a manning clause if the strike is to be resolved.

Pacific Press wants to set manning levels in the pressroom and has said the manning clause in the old contract, which expired Oct. 31, amounts to featherbedding.

Kagel says in the report the pressmen's contention that manning provisions under the old pact are justified "must be discounted because the union rejected impartial testing of their premises through arbitration or mediation-arbitration."

"The position that manning is not for sale is thus an intransigent one which, unless the employer folds, creates an unbridgable impasse. The employer may now take a short-term truce, if it makes some gains and does not pay a great deal for it.

"But what needs to be done is to have pressmen willingness, on a much greater basis than in the past, to bargain about what it (sic) can get for manning to have the strike resolved."

Kagel says a difficulty in resolving the issue is that, under the manning clause in the old contract, pressmen have an expectancy of significant income working overtime shifts.

Kagel says that, once into

And the 30-year-old millwright has even been accused of being an anarchist and a fascist.

"Words people don't understand, they stick on you," he says, not really bothered by it. "Yet the same people accept like sheep that politics and the courts will always go against them and that they can do nothing to change things."

Myron Zarry has been trying to change things. Because he and his wife, Janice, are strongly opposed to the federal government's commitment to nuclear technology and fear for the future safety of their children, Leon, 6, and Rachel, 4, Myron has refused to file an income tax return for the last three years. That landed him in Ladysmith provincial court where a few days ago he was found guilty and fined $600.

Though most of his taxes are deducted from his paycheque, Zarry feels that by signing the tax return form he is consenting to the way the government uses the tax money. And he does not consent.

"I'm not objecting to paying taxes," he explains. "I don't mind the money going towards other things, pro-life things. But some things offend me so deeply I don't want to pay for them."

What Zarry wanted was a contract with the government to exclude him from paying to subsidize the nuclear industry. He talked to several Revenue Canada officials on the phone but they wouldn't really listen to his reasoning.

And so the well-read and articulate millwright went to court armed with data from all over North America on the hazards of low-level radiation. But he wasn't allowed to give any of what he considered evidence. He was told by the judge it was irrelevant to the charges.

"So where do you make your protest?" he asks. "Not signing a piece of paper didn't seem to be such an anti-social crime to me."

Next year, Myron says, he'll probably sign the form but will send an accompanying letter pointing out that it is not to be construed as approval of anything done on his behalf.

He took this line, he says, because of the way Canada has been selling reactors to military dictatorships and pushing ahead with nuclear power plants. He also took it because Canadians don't seem to be disagreeing with this enough.

"The Harrisburg thing, the China Syndrome — it's funny how things have broken loose at this time," Zarry says. "No, not funny. It's all very frightening."

"Well, thyroid disfunction is mental retardation," she adds angrily.

"I don't care if I have to live by candlelight," Myron says, "just as long as we don't have people who mine the uranium suffering from radiation poisoning and the rest of us living in danger."

The average person has to get more involved, Zarry believes. People put a cross on a ballot sheet and spend their working days paying for it.

"The democratic system can be enlarged; the involvement can be enlarged," he says. "The very reason people came to this country was to get away from oppression and have more freedom. They wanted to get to the New World. Well, there's no New World left, so we can't run anywhere. We must now try to change things here.

"People say jobs and the growing economy are the most important things but they're not. If you're not alive, who the hell cares?

"We're not perfect. Though I work hard with my hands, there are times when I simply screw up. Yet we are led to believe through the political system there are perfect people who never make mistakes.

"The government's responsibility to uphold the law has been stretched to the limit as far as pushing nuclear technology down our throats. No insurance company will cover this house against radiation."

Myron Zarry pauses, reflects for a moment, and then points out that if you drive a vehicle carelessly and you might hurt someone, you can be charged. You don't have to do it.

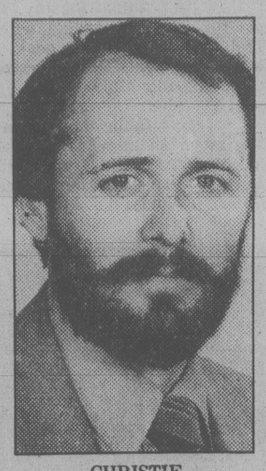

"Yet to turn things around the other way and to think that the government is risking our lives and reducing the possibility of our children ever having a life, it makes me as mad as hell."

Despite his courtroom setback, Myron feels there's hope of an end to the whole thing.

"Many people have come to me and felt comforted by the fact that I was able to say no," he explains. "There is hope that others will follow and that one day people will realize they don't have to put up with everything that is thrust upon them."

What about the ones who call him names? Myron Zarry grins.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Western community voters may well decide who wins Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding May 10.

Though relocation of the riding's boundaries means Mitchell has to work that much harder this time, it appears the race will again be tight with Kahl and Mitchell easily the front-runners.

The whole of Victoria West, from the Johnson Street bridge to Dominion Road, an area which traditionally has voted strongly NDP, has now been switched to the Victoria riding.

The Marigold and Strawberry Vale areas from Burnside Road to the old Interurban right-of-way have also been carved off and are now part of Saanich-The Islands.

Mitchell, a veteran Esquimalt police sergeant who was Esquimalt's NDP MLA from 1951-1952, says the loss of Vic West will be a bonanza for Gordon Hanson, running-mate for NDP Charles Barber in Victoria.

Mitchell says his campaign started back in 1975.

And with more than 600 workers and hundreds of orange and black lawn signs, the indications are Mitchell is running strongly in both Esquimalt and Metchosin.

The number of loggers in the Sooke and Port Renfrew areas, all members of the International Woodworkers of America, could produce a hefty NDP vote in that part of the riding.

If there is a weak area for thr NDP in the riding, it probably lies in Colwood, Langford and View Royal where there is a dearth of Mitchell election signs, compared with Esquimalt and Metchosin.

Although the riding has shrunk in size, the number of eligible voters has increased from 33,785 to close to 35,000 this year.

It is these voters, mostly located in rapidly-growing Colwood, Langford and View Royal, who could decide who sits in the house after May 10.

The other candidates in the riding are Conservative Bill Langlois and independents Doug Christie (Western Independence Party), Don Stansall who spearheaded the citizen-based Taxpayers on the March in 1978 and Wayne Williams, a ship oiler whose says he'll stay honest if elected and work for the little guy.

While Langlois and the three independents will all get a share of the vote, nobody believes, except perhaps themselves and their campaign workers, their efforts will be enough.

Neither Mitchell nor Kahl can be credited with running colorful campaigns. They rely on records, rather then rhetoric.

In spite of the growing number of new homes, many of them with a family boat or camper on the plot, the pundits repeatedly say the riding is essentially working class territory.

But does this mean there is no disenchantment with the NDP?

Take as an example the shopkeeper in the Hatley Park Shopping Centre who says she doesn't bring in expensive products to sell, relying on those more suited to leaner pocketbooks.

She hasn't made her mind up yet on which way she'll vote but adds, "If the NDP goes in again they will have learned their lesson. They won't be such a giveaway government."

One of her employees lives on Munro Street in Esquimalt, dubbed "Mitchell Land" because of the preponderance of Mitchell signs. Her vote isn't certain either.

She says she knows the rest of her family will vote NDP, but last time she voted Tory because of former Conservative leader Scott Wallace. This time might be different.

The provincial government's decision to create the Urban Transport Authority and levy regional districts with the cost of public transit has won the NDP the vote of an elderly man in Langford.

He's not happy at the prospect of having to pay an extra three cents a gallon for gas with the threat of bigger Hydro bills and higher property taxes for a transit system he never uses.

Doug Christie, who is convinced an independent B.C. is the best thing that could happen to this province, is sure of at least one vote in View Royal.

A storeowner there agrees with Christie that Ottawa's trade policies are overly-obsessed with the protection of manufacturing and industry in Ontario and Quebec.

A woman in View Royal lauded Kahl for his involvement in community affairs but feels he is being too low-profile in two current View Royal issues — the proposed transfer of oil tank farms from the Inner Harbor to that area and the building of a facility for dumping sewage near the new Helmcken Road Hospital.

Kahl, who says he's standing on his record, believes his efforts in helping to get such things as an overpass on the Trans Canada Highway are paying off.

He claims his community involvement is gaining him support even from non-Socreds.

He says this campaign is a more rational one than in 1975 with less emotion and funds easier to raise.

He says his top priorities are individual ownership, individual involvement, individual rights and individual opportunity.

Langlois, on the other hand, says the riding is being eyed as a dumping area by both the Socreds and NDP, the former going along with oil tank farms in View Royal — or at least not voicing any objections — and Victoria NDP candidate Charles Barber suggesting a light industrial park be created at Work Point.

Langlois has been knocking on doors since December and says the riding's biggest problem is unemployment, estimating it is at least 16 per cent.

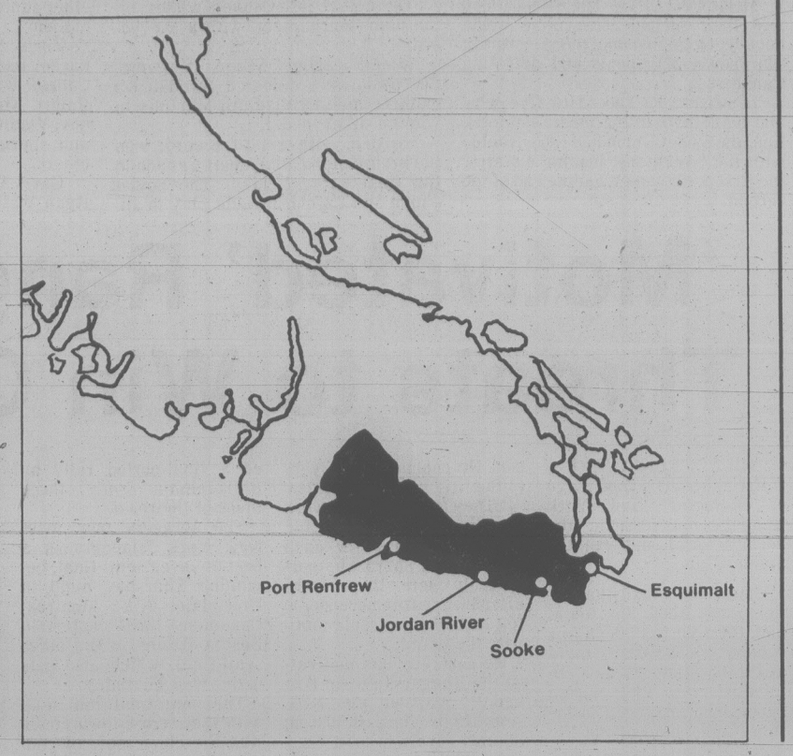

He sees neither Kahl nor Mitchell being able to work with any great effect as backbenchers in whatever party comes to power on May 10.

Mitchell, on the other hand, says it is up to MLAs to get up and fight for their areas and he disagrees with Barber on his Work Point suggestion.

Mitchell says if he gets back into the legislature, he wants the province to create its own fishing ministry, claiming B.C. is the only salt-water province without one.

Mitchell also wants forest management improved so that local mills are guaranteed adequate supplies of logs.

He says Sooke Forest Products must import hemlock logs from Port Angeles. Secondary industry should be created to make better use of chips and byproducts.

GVLRA Destroying Accord: CUPE

The Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association is intent on destroying any semblance of good labor-management relations, a Canadian Union of Public Employees spokesman has charged.

Jim Walker, spokesman for a Joint Negotiating Committee (JNC) representing five CUPE locals, laid the charge this week in a letter to Victoria area councils and the Greater Victoria school board.

He says in the letter the GVLRA "appears to be intent on obstructing an honorable settlement rather than working towards a peaceful one which would be fair and just to all concerned."

The strongly-worded letter is the latest move in a contract dispute involving more than 1,800 municipal employees in Esquimalt, Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney as well as school board workers.

Last week the GVLRA, which bargains for the employers, rejected a union request for a conciliation board to settle the outstanding issues which centre around wages.

The JNC is seeking a 17-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement while the employers' "final offer" is for a 7.25-per-cent hike in a one-year contract.

Walker said the union is appealling directly to the employers because the workers feel their case has not been properly heard.

Also, he said, it would be better to go the conciliation board route now rather than wait until after a lengthy strike or lockout.

Such action is in the cards, he said, but the employees don't want to be forced into a position of having to walk off the job, particularly during exam time in the schools or during the busy tourist season.

In his letter, Walker says the GVLRA's actions to date are "undemocratic, indecent and inexcusably damaging to the justifiable needs of the employees and the relationship of the parties."

He says for the past two years the employees have settled for less than the cost of living and it is not fair, reasonable or decent to force them to do so for another two years.

Figures in the letter show that the CUPE workers settled for six per cent in 1977 when the cost of living went up 9.2 per cent. They settled for four per cent in 1978 when the cost of living went up 8.2 per cent. That resulted in a wage increase in those two years which was 7.4 per cent less than the cost of living, Walker says.

The projected cost-of-living increase for 1979 and 1980 is 10.8 per cent and if the workers settled for the 7.25 per cent rate that the employers' are offering they would fall another 3.55 per cent behind in each of the years.

That would put the employees 14.5 per cent behind the cost of living over the four years, the letter says.

"We believe you inherited an elected responsibility when you assumed office which included assurance that employees in your jurisdiction would receive fair treatment.

"Your employees do not accept as fair treatment the sight of their incomes falling 14.5 per cent below the cost of living."

Boater Rescued

The Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre alerted the diving unit after a woman phoned to say she could see a small white boat on its side with a man clinging to it.

The man, who refused to give his name, was a non-swimmer. He was wearing a lifejacket and had been in the water 15 to 20 minutes.

Crane Frees Sea Lion From Graving Dock

Dock superintendent David Holmes said the sea lion probably swam into the dock about 12:20 a.m. when the water was raised to allow the container ship Sealand Exchange to enter the dock.

When the water was lowered the sea lion was discovered and Esquimalt police were called in to help.

They contacted the SPCA, which said it wasn't in the sea lion business. Sealand of the Pacific was then called and head trainer Cees Schragge, along with Wayne Wagner, general manager of Oak Bay Marina, arrived with a cage.

He took one look at the water and jumped 30 feet down into the harbor and freedom.

"He looked at the water and that was it," Schrage said.

Fish Farm Proposal Tabled

A Saanich resident's proposal to create an eight-acre lake north of Prospect Lake for fish-farming and a wide range of recreational uses was tabled by Saanich council's planning committee Tuesday night until reports are received from senior government agencies.

Edward Travers, 205 Meadowbrook Road, wants to purchase 37 acres of municipal land adjoining his own 23-acre property and develop the area as a recreational centre.

His proposal includes an expansion of his present trout-rearing facilities as well as construction of a caretaker's house.

The lake would be created by flooding what is now a peat bog, municipal planner Gil Laurenson said in a report which recommended approval in principle of Travers' proposal.

Despite Travers' assurances that he had all necessary water licences, and had contacted officials in the fish and wildlife and water rights branches, aldermen decided to ask for a full environmental evaluation from such agencies.

Car Cutoff Opposed

Victoria council Thursday will debate a modified proposal to close the Government Street mall to vehicle traffic for three weeks this summer, but the proposal hasn't been scaled down enough to suit the Victoria Downtown Business Association.

President Philip Holmes Tuesday told a meeting of the Central Business Advisory Committee he was opposed to any closure of the mall.

The proposal is to block Government St. to car traffic from Humboldt to Fort during Victorian Day festivities May 18-28 and again July 16-30.

Earlier, there had been a proposal for a summer-long closure of the mall during business hours.

"I'm appalled council would even consider closure of such an important lifeline in the city's economy," Holmes said.

The proposal was put forward by Ald. Bill McElroy, city traffic committee chairman.

He said the mall could be a focal point for pedestrian activities such as street dances and fashion shows.

Merchants have expressed concern about litter, loitering and loss of business if the street becomes a meeting place.

Also at the Tuesday meeting, Holmes said the Victoria Downtown Business Assocation wants council to put a high priority on preserving railway rights—of—way for possible transportation corridors into the central business district.

Once the rights—of—way are sold, it would be virtually impossible to restore them, he said.

Pair of Boys Plucked From Hydro Tower

Two seven-year-old boys were rescued unharmed Tuesday night after they climbed to the top of a 80-foot B.C. Hydro main transmission tower near Helmcken Road and couldn't get down.

Hydro officials cut off the power in the 138,000-volt line to rescue Justin Dolfi of View Royal Avenue and Jamie Baker of Helmcken Road.

While the pair, Grade 1 students at View Royal elementary school, miraculously escaped unharmed, the incident has sparked grave concern among school and hydro officials and police.

View Royal principal Gerry Bell said today a Hydro safety program was run at the school only two weeks ago and students were told about the dangers of electricity.

Hydro spokesman Dorothy Tupper said it is a mystery how the boys managed to climb the tower as barbed-wire is wound around the base to a height of 10 feet.

Officials are now wondering if the barbed-wire is enough of a deterrent and what other measures can be taken.

The incident began shortly after 7 p.m. when a nearby resident spotted the youngsters climbing the tower.

Tupper said the father of one of the boys was contacted and went up after them and told them to remain where they were until help arrived.

Colwood RCMP were alerted at 7:14 p.m. and a Hydro crew, which happened to be in the area reached the scene minutes later.

Tupper said the boys had passed the lines and reached the top of the tower.

The power was cut at the Duncan station at 7:49 p.m. to allow RCMP Const. James O'Donnell and hydro crew members Howie Horner, Vic Favell and Bob Kent to rescue the pair.
